THE HOME.

Flower Pot Trays.

We believe in having a very generous amount of light in the house, and we also delight in plants. A flowerstand always seems to monopolize too much of a window, and it is not at all satisfactory to set the flower-pots on the window-sills; then the room is not so bright, and the plants are apt to get chilled if they are too close to the window pane, and besides, in this way, the pots themselves exclude much light.

To overcome all these objections a writer says: I had some trays made which were about four inches deep, as long as the width of the windows, and wide enough for six or eight inch pots. They are made of an ornamental hard pine moulding, such as is used for window casings under the window-sill. I rubbed them with hard oil, which makes a very nice finish. They are supported by iron brackets fastened to the studs of the wall, the latter being screwed fast to the window facing, and the pasteboard, bringing the top of the tray just under the window sill. The trays are filled perhaps half with soil, and the effect is quite pleasing from an aesthetic point of view, and we have only plants, instead of pots, in the light, as very little of the pots show. The effect is much prettier than when the entire crotch is in the window or on a flower stand. The window shades can be drawn over the trays much more readily, without interfering with the plants, and I am quite sure I prefer my new trays to anything else I have tried or seen.

The Matter of Cushions.

Whoever heard of a house with too many cushions? The chairs need cushions, and so do the hammock, the sofas, lounges, divans, while generous, sturdy cushions for the feet are among the luxuries of rest. Always cover cushions first with unbleached muslin or bed ticking, and then put over it the outer covering. This will prevent the stuffing from working out, and the pretty cases from wearing out too quickly. Delicate, tinted coverings for cushions ought to be made of materials that may be laundered, for nothing is more offensive than a soiled cushion.

There is a wide range of cloths to choose from, even under this condition. China silks, pongees, chamois, and lawns, and silks, damask, chamois, and lawns are some of the fabrics. Chintz, cretonne and velours make suitable coverings for the cushions that will be hard service, while grasscloth is especially adapted to cover veranda or hammock cushions, as it is not injured by the sun. There are also several materials for filling the cushions. Excelsior or hay will answer to put in cushions for the floor or doorstep, when curled hair cannot be had. Hair cushions ought to be tufted, and, when so made are the best for chair seats. But hair, as well as wool, which is an excellent stuffing, mat and pack down, and cushion filled with either of these substances will need to be made occasionally, and the hair or wool picked apart.

Goose-down is not as desirable as the costly eider down, because it works through cloth. Goose feathers are the best filling for sofas and lounge cushions, where an outer coat of hen's feathers will form a fair stuffing for a cushion with excelsior or hay as the inner filling. Hen's feathers, if they are also would make a cushion too heavy.

Economy in Buying.

There is little advantage anywhere to the family of average size in buying large quantities of groceries like sugar, cereals, spices, etc.

One disadvantage of buying in large quantities lies in the tendency we have of using more than is actually necessary, merely because there is an abundance. For this reason a barrel of sugar may get emptied sooner than if the same weight were dealt out in weekly portions.

It is often better economy to buy flour by the bag than the barrel, and butter by having a single barrel for all purposes, we may have one bag for pastry, another for bread and another of entire wheat flour. This is by far the best plan, as the bulk of the bread is bought instead of being made in the house, and the time is consumed in bread making is not so great as in better, cheaper manner than it is now made at home. Other cereal preparations should be purchased in small quantities, as they are prone to grow old and be attacked by vermin.

Some Good Recipes.

Meat Balls—Save your scraps of meat if you do not wish to make hash, you can make very tempting meat balls by the following method: Chop the meat exceedingly fine, removing all bits of bone or gristle, mix with potatoes (either mashed or chopped fine). If you have no cold potatoes at hand use left over rice or eggs chopped fine (or both). Some use bread softened with a little milk. Season well, roll in long balls something the shape of an egg. Now roll them in egg and cracker crumbs, same as for cutlets. Fry brown by turning occasionally. This method uses up scraps of different kinds, and they are very nice indeed.

Turkey Soup—Very few bone their turkey, but when this can be done, it makes a nice dish; besides the delicious soup made from boiling the bones by first breaking them up. It is a good idea to wait until the turkey is partly eaten and then use the scraps to the soup. Add whatever vegetables are used, with plenty of tomatoes; season well. Bone from one turkey will not make a large amount of soup if you desire it rich and good.

Cakes Without Shortening—This is a good way to make fried cakes without any shortening: One teaspoon of sugar, 1 teaspoon fresh milk, 1 egg, a little nutmeg, or cinnamon. If preferred, a pinch of salt, 2 or 3 drops of good quality powder, flour enough to roll. —Old Maid.

Whatever you are by nature, keep to it; never desert your own line of talent. Be what nature intended you to be, and you will succeed; if he anything else, and you will be a thousand times worse than nothing. —ydney Smith.

THE SITUATION IN CUBA.

The Situation in the Island is One of Increasing Gravity.

The despatch from Spain of heavy rain forecasts for the Cuban provinces indicates that the situation in the island is one of increasing gravity. Some proof of this is found in the report of numerous engagements between the insurgents and regular troops, the establishment of a provisional government, etc., but the strongest evidence is a reinforcement of the garrisons by Spanish regulars exceeding in strength any that has been made since the patriot war. The only conclusion to be drawn from such extraordinary precautions, taken so far as can be learned from the meagre despatches from Havana, when few successes have been scored by the insurgents, is that some change has occurred in the situation on the island, or is considered to be imminent, which justifies unusual measures. That this change is so steady a diminution of the old feud between the native Cuban and Spanish sections of the population, and under the intolerable pressure of the war, the people are now so disaffected that division can no longer be counted on, may safely be assumed. To fully appreciate this, it must be borne in mind that the regular garrison maintained by Spain in Cuba has not exceeded 10,000 men, and that the chief dependence of the Madrid government for the suppression of revolt in the island has been a volunteer force of some 40,000 men, recruited almost wholly from the Spanish-born section of the population. Were this force once united with the regulars against the Spaniards, rule not all the regulars at Spain's command would suffice to suppress its revolt; and although it is still in the Spanish service, and subject to call, the heavy reinforcements now being forwarded from the mother country, indicate that its loyalty has become so unreliable that it should be so, administrative corruption, oppressive taxation, and economic burdens by an official class which has no interest in the different elements of the population of the island into closer sympathy and union. Spanish and Cuban born alike find themselves taxed at every turn, are forced to buy in the market in which their produce has least value, see all offices given by the military authorities to favorites who are expected to pay a commission on their profits to those who appointed them, and feel themselves systematically plundered by an official class which has no interest in them or in the island. Such conditions have naturally weakened the loyalty of all sections of the population of Spain and the Spanish planters, who after the patriot war fought the confiscated Cuban estates, and the industrial class which lives off the sugar industry now threatened with ruin, are with the merchants thoroughly disaffected toward Spanish rule. So long as reciprocity with the United States continues, the popular discontent will be in abeyance, but with its collapse, and the increasing competition of European beet sugar, it has revived, and has given the form of a movement of political union with this country. The old question of forty years ago has become uppermost in Cuba, and under radically different conditions, for then annexation was the last hope of the Southern slaveholders, while now it is the only chance of prosperity for the "Ever Faithful Isle."

THE CATTLE TRADE.

Canada Will Benefit from the Scarcity of Cattle in the United States.

It is not improbable that the farmers of Canada, and more especially of Ontario and the North-West will derive advantage from the rise in the price of beef in Chicago, due to the decrease in the supply of cattle. Great Britain is a large consumer of United States beef, horned cattle to the value of over $40,000,000, and beef to the value of over $20,000,000 being annually imported, figures which dwarf almost into insignificance the trade of Canada with Britain, and as Canadian beef is expected to be in the rule for cattle in America, markets for some time to come, the stock raisers of this country will participate in the advance so far as the European demand is concerned. The American duty of 20 per cent, practically excludes Canadian animals from the United States market, and the immense market Canada depending largely on the American supply, the existence of this duty will not operate to deprive our farmers, to any extent, of the benefits of the rise in the United States. According to Mr. Armour of Chicago, the most extensive cattle dealer and packer in the world, the increase in the price of beef is due entirely to the falling off in the supply. The figures show that the

at the four principal western markets of the United States, that for this time amount to nearly 270,000 head compared with a year ago. The shortage in pounds of dressed beef is about the same, the amount to about 175,000,000 nearly 2,000,000 per day. As to how long the present high prices will continue, "aids Mr. Armour, "I can say that in my opinion there will be no material reduction inside of four or five years, for the reason that it takes that long to raise cattle and fit them for the market. I really see no relief from the high prices under four or five years, but that is not the fault of any man or set of men." Other leading cattle dealers in Chicago hold similar opinions. A member of the firm of Swift & Co. states "the scarcity of cattle is responsible for the advance and no other reason can be ascribed. Statistics do not show that the decrease in cattle is due to any one cause, but to the increase in price. The packers have no control whatever over the price now. It has gone beyond the power of any set of men to control it. Present prices promise to continue for some time to come, but just how long no man can say with any degree of accuracy. It will be, undoubtedly, several years before the price of beef comes down again. Corn is high and the ranches in Wyoming and Colorado are short of Panhandle haven't the cattle on them they once had." The price of Western States cattle has been about 23 cents a pound within a year, and if the other price to continue for two or three years yet, it will become a serious matter for consumers. The farmers, however, will regard the situation with different feelings.

All sorts are different because they come from men; morality is everywhere the same, because it comes from God.—Voltaire.

DANGERS IN FLANNELS.

THEY ARE LARGELY RESPONSIBLE FOR COLDS AND ALL ILLNESS.

How Not to Take Cold—Have Your Underclothing Tight and Loose and Keep Your Natural Heat—How to Take Care of the Body.

A physician who has given much thought to the hygiene of clothing has come to the conclusion that many deaths are caused by heavy woollen underclothing.

It can be proved that flannels are often the cause of severe colds. To have a cold is to be in a diseased condition, and that means a loss of vitality and a shortening of life. It may even mean sudden death.

One can easily demonstrate in one's own person "on a small scale the ill effects of excessive flannels. Bind your hand in thick woollen bandages and leave it in that condition for a night. In the morning you will find it damp and flabby, the pores all open. It is in the most susceptible condition or catching cold. If the whole body were brought to the same state the result of exposure to cold air would inevitably be disastrous.

That the whole body is often brought to a nearly similar condition is certain. The majority of people during the winter encase themselves in heavy, tight woollen or flannel garments. These and do not absorb it. The result is that the wearer's skin is hot, damp and highly susceptible to the inflammatory effects of cold. A slightly lowered temperature can hardly fail to bring on a cold.

Heavy woollen underclothing is able to do all the more harm, because it has the weight of ancient domestic tradition. Few people dare to be wiser than their grandmothers. "Wool is the best," according to modern experience, should be as light as a consistent with comfort. There are many persons who go through the winter in chilly, wet, cotton underwear, and these are probably the most fortunate class of the population. But the warmth preserving qualities of wool are not to be ignored.

One of its great properties is that it is a bad conductor of heat. The heat of the body, therefore, is not given out by it, it also does not stick to the skin and does not absorb perspiration freely. This is a quality of doubtful value. While it is agreeable to have your underclothing suited to your skin, it is injurious to carry a deposit of moisture which may become cold and do harm in all parts of the body. The object, therefore, should be to wear underclothing which does not cause excessive perspiration. It should be light and loose. Wool is apparently the best material for the majority of people.

The subject of colds receives too little attention. Many people are resigned to the perpetual possession of them. They should be regarded as diseases, dangerous, offensive and unclean. Patent medicine advertisements print eloquent descriptions of colds, under radically different conditions, applicable to those who have neglected themselves too long, and are fit subjects for the hospital or prolonged medical treatment, including attention to clothing and the general health is more valuable than all remedies and treatment.

Colds are probably the chief cause of illness and disease among human beings. They give little trouble to animals, who wear no clothing. Arguing from these facts, some enthusiasts would say that the less clothing you wear and the more you expose yourself

THE HEALTHIER YOU WILL BE.

But a state of civilization of considerable antiquity has made it necessary for man to preserve his natural heat by artificial means. It is not permissible to abate one's clothing in nature country. It is not advisable to wear as little as the public authorities will permit during an American winter. Neither warm clothing nor actual heat will satisfactorily reduce the natural heat of the body. To preserve this should be the first aim of all who wish to avoid the "flesh food" of fresh air and exercise are obviously the principal means.

In the care of the body the skin should take an important place. As far as colds are concerned it is all important, because the skin is the great organ of the body, and they rarely occur unless the skin is in a certain condition. When the pores of the skin are open and the air is free to enter it is not wanted and causes an inflammation. In cold weather the pores should be closed. Cold water is an excellent vehicle for closing the pores. The weight of experience seems to prove that it is better to use warm water first. Much depends on the season of the year. The warm water cleanses and softens the skin and relieves the body of superfluous moisture, the frequent source of colds. Following this, the cold water will close the pores and put the skin in a sound, normal condition. No one should stay in cold water long enough to feel discomfort.

A War Incident.

It is a rare thing, even in the gorgeous East, for real life to be funnier than comic opera. But though no real Mikado has ever been quite so laughable as the gentleman presented to us in Sullivan and Gilbert's musical satire, the story which reaches us of the Chinese General Wu surpasses all actual or imaginable travesties of the comicities of his native land. It was a question of persuading the Japanese to become his prisoners of war. Any other commander might have felt that the first step to take was to defeat the Japanese in battle. However, General Wu, as became a General in a country where competitive examination rules promotion, hit upon a more intellectual method. He created a number of "artificial" "stuntmen" and "avoid death." He called upon the enemy to prostrate themselves before those posters; they should then be taken care of by officers with a reputation for charity and justice. But in spite of this offer the Japanese charged and broke up the troops of General Wu. One would wonder whether he holds them guilty of a breach of faith for ignoring the rules of the game, which he had drawn up so elaborately for their use and benefit.

KRUPP GUNS IN DAHOMEY.

The First Shot Fired Killed an Elephant and Caused Great Consternation.

The King of Dahomey received some Krupp cannon not long ago, and conceived the idea of having them mounted on elephants' backs for use in the field. With much difficulty this project was carried out, and at the next military review the king ordered that one of the guns be fired immediately in front of the royal position, first taking the precaution to place a couple of thousand prisoners where it was calculated the ball would strike, as an excuse for the effectiveness of the shot. When all was ready one of the biggest elephants was backed around and sighted. Just as the layard was jerked, however, the animal turned half around to reach for a peanut or something, and the shell took off the prime minister's head and knocked a hole as big as a sewer through the royal palace.

His majesty wouldn't have cared so much if the matter had ended there, as the minister wasn't very prime and the palace needed ventilation—but it didn't. On the contrary, the elephants, which had been stood on its head by the result, picked it self up in a fury and started in on the down grand stand the very first rush, along the grand chamberlain and the past grand carver of mistresses into the next street. It then jumped into the brass band with all four feet, and if it hadn't gotten the big drum over its head so that it couldn't see, it would probably have cleaned out the entire congregation. The king was not found until the next morning, and then, as he slid down out of a banana tree, he was heard to remark that there was only one thing needed to render his new artillery system an entire success—that was to get the enemy to adopt it.

A Boy's Effort to Explain Things.

Mamma, do you like to kiss Mrs. Jewhiller?

No, dear.

Do you think Mrs. Jewhiller likes to kiss you?

I don't think she does.

Then why do you and she always kiss when you meet?

I don't know, dear.

Don't you think Mrs. Jewhiller would rather to kiss than kiss her?

I have no doubt of it.

Wouldn't you rather Mrs. Jewhiller kiss you than kiss her?

Oh, yes, much!

Then that must be why.

Paine's Celery Compound Set Him on the Rock of Health.

Indigestion, Stomach Troubles, Headache, Sleeplessness and Anxiety.

The Great Spring Medicine Sweeps Away These Troubles.

In almost every Canadian home, one or more members suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia, headache, nervousness or sleeplessness. In the great majority of cases the doctors have failed to effect a permanent cure, and the common patent medicines of our times have only prolonged suffering and agony.

How different the result with those who have used Paine's Celery Compound! They have in every case been raised to a condition of perfect health, robustness and mental vigor. Thousands of renewed and re-created men and women in Canada, will forever remember that their lives were saved and made happy by Paine's Celery Compound.

Mr. Hugh J. Riley, of 42 Agnes street, St. Henry, Montreal, is one of the many who have given public testimony for the benefit of sufferers in Canada. Mr. Riley writes as follows: "I wish to publicly acknowledge the fact that I have indebted to Paine's Celery Compound for health, strength and life. For over three years I was a terrible sufferer from indigestion, severe pains in the stomach and bowels. In addition to these serious troubles, I had no appetite or relief for food, and hardly knew what it was to have a full night's rest. This condition of sleeplessness and anxiety made me very nervous, and I was fast becoming unfitted for my daily work. After all other remedies had failed, I was fortunately advised to use Paine's Celery Compound, and now I am delighted to declare that I have no equal in the world for strength and health. I am daily gaining in strength, sleep well every night, and my appetite is good and healthy. I strongly recommend Paine's Celery Compound to all who need a reliable and honest medicine, and one that is sure to cure."

PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY PATRONS

A large meeting of prominent Patrons from all parts of Prince Edward was held in the Opera House, Pictou, on Saturday afternoon to listen to addresses from Mr. J. L. Haycock, M. P., and Mr. J. A. Cavan, M. P., and Mr. Wm. Anderson, the county president of the Pictou Lodge, opened the meeting with a short address, followed by a short speech from Mr. M. Williams, who read a letter from Mr. Haycock, stating his inability to be present, owing to the fact that he had to be present at a meeting at Pictou. Mr. J. A. Cavan was called upon to give an account of the session of the grand lodge, which he did, and then Mr. J. L. Haycock, M. P., spoke at length on the question of the present session of the Ontario parliament. He was followed by Mr. N. G. Rose, warden of the county, who also endorsed the course pursued by Mr. Cavan and the Pictou element in the House. The following resolution was read and carried unanimously: Moved by Mr. A. S. Cavan, seconded by Mr. J. Knox, a resolution, that the county president, Mr. John Cavan, M. P., in the Ontario Legislature during its recent session is satisfactory to this meeting and so on as commended itself to the large body of electors of Prince Edward who reported confidence in Bro. Cavan in June last. We also express confidence in Bro. Haycock, as leader of the Pictou element in the said legislature and also endorse the candidature of Bro. Pettit for the County of Canada.

A WONDERFUL POWER IN TEN CENTS.

A few days ago an Ontario druggist said: "The ladies are buying more Diamond Dyes than any time in past years. They come to me and buy one package as an experiment, and find the dye so easy to use that they now color most of their old clothing, and come out with new gowns, cloaks, jackets and suits for the whole family. In my experience of 20 years as a druggist, I must say that Diamond Dyes are the only package dyes that have lived and worked themselves up to the highest point of popularity."

Beware of imitation package dyes, they are fraudulent and deceptive, and when used cause a vast amount of trouble and disappointment. Ask for the Diamond; see that the name "Diamond" is on each package; refuse all others no matter how strongly you are urged to give them a trial.

A DOCTOR ARRESTED.

Dr. F. Yones, of Deshbir, was tried in the Renfrew police court Tuesday, April 23, with having found and kept a value containing about $1,500, lost by James McReary, a paymaster for J. R. Booth & Son, of Ottawa.

McReary lost the value between Renfrew and Shantou on the 31st of March, and in the course of his trip met Dr. Yones. The latter claimed when a search was made that he had no knowledge of the missing value, but stated that he had met three Adams men (farmers who had such a value in their buggy). His description of the lost article being very accurate it struck the owner that the Doctor must have seen it, and as the three farmers arose positively that they knew nothing of it Dr. Yones was arrested.

Mr. Craig conducted the prosecution and the prisoner not being represented by counsel endeavored to defend himself, protesting his innocence with tears in his eyes. Magistrate Eady after reviewing the evidence submitted decided to commit Dr. Yones for trial at the Pembroke assizes.

Ottawa, April 29.—A conversation held a few days ago with a well known Ottawa physician revealed the fact that a far larger percentage of the community than generally believed are suffering from the insidious symptoms of Bright's Disease. He also stated that he had taken a considerable interest in the reported case of Mr. G. H. Kent, of this city, and admitted that in view of the published interviews and the affidavit of Mr. Kent, he had no hesitation in ascribing that gentleman's recovery from a very serious condition to Dr. J. HOW WOMEN WILL LOOK

WHEN THE DRESS REFORM COMES TO BE POPULAR.

The U. S. National Council of Women Was Largely in Favor of It—A Fight for Physical Freedom Inaugurated—The Syrian Costume for the House.

Of the most interesting facts that were made evident by the recent meeting of the United States National Council of Women, was one that there is a great body of opinion in favor of reform in women's dress. If women are in favor of reforming their dress, there is no doubt that they are able to reform it.

The council is a grand federation of the feminine thinkers of the United States. It represents the Women's Christian Temperance Union, Sororals, the Suffrage Association, the Kindergarten Union, the Republican Association, the Relief Society and many other organizations.

Some of the ablest members of the council are prominent dress reformers. They have been occupied for many years in spreading their ideas on the subject. As they come from all parts of the country and are very able and convincing disseminators of ideas, it follows that dress reform must be implanted deep in the minds of many citizens of all ages and sexes.

If there is one thing that still distinguishes man from woman it is dress. The dress of woman is the only thing that has steadily developed in the direction of usefulness and ugliness. Trousers probably mark the limit of usefulness and ugliness. While man's dress has progressed in the aforesaid direction, woman's attire has remained persistently ornamental. It has varied with a frequency that is unknown to man, but the object in view has always been decorative.

Many a shallow-minded male believes no doubt that the underlying motive of dress reform is mere envy of his trousers. Women may envy them in so far as they are useful, but at the same time they shudder at their ugliness. Still, in intelligence and artistic taste enough to enable her to design something at once as serviceable and less offensive to the eye. She has the advantage of not being cramped by a century of custom to the parallel cylinders, and also of being trained in the fashioning of artistic draperies and the combining of harmonious colors.

But the skirt is not the worst feature of woman's dress to a reformer. Corsets and the system by which a great weight is suspended from the waist are certainly the worst evils. Skirts are bad when they are long enough to gather up dirt, but many reformers include them, properly to man, but the object in view has always been decorative.

Dress reform is not accomplished in a day. The change is now taking place. Thoughtful women throughout the land are wearing reformed garments. Women bicyclists who wear bloomers are doing a good work in preparing public sentiment for the change.

The dress reformers of the National Council of Women are both practical and moderate in their ideas. They do not wish to provide amenable for the frivolous. Some would rather conceal their most cherished devices than to have them exposed.

Certain general principles governing the construction of a rational costume may be deduced from their remarks. It should allow every part of the body its natural action and be short enough to relieve the wearer's hands from the necessity of keeping the skirts out of the way of her own action. Her dress should be made as far as possible to be borne by the shoulders. Corsets are by these conditions obviously excluded.

Mrs. Leavens, who is a wearer of the new gowns and a leader of the crusade, teaches a large class in physical culture. Mrs. Leavens was dressed in the Empire style. Her dress was made of a dark shade of blue flannel, was all in one piece, and hung in soft folds from the neck to the feet. Under the bust were bands of golden brocade, which added a unique and classical effect with the straight lines.

"I am sure that the new style of dress is gaining rapidly," she remarked. "But I find it hard to get women to discard their corsets. It is impossible to get a man to wear tight clothing, and it is far more injurious to women to wear their organs are far more delicate, and as she is the mother of the coming generation, she should take particular care to have her body free and healthy. In this Empire gown we find a union of ease and health and beauty and economy. As it never goes out of fashion it is cheap, and all critics agree that it is artistic."

"For the house the Syrian costume is excellent when the woman has to do her own work and is compelled to run up and down stairs much. And for the street in summer the Empire dress is the best. There is no reason why a woman should sit in the street in warm weather, and in winter it can be covered by a long cloak, which is a necessity anyway in cold weather. I believe that the new style will do away with the corset, and thus a much healthier race will people the world. Every day we are getting more and more the only thing that keeps women back is the fear of being different from the rest. But I have heard a great many mothers who told me it was too late for them to wear a rational style of dress but to persuade their daughters to throw away their corsets."

"This movement is not a 'fad,' as many think, but a real uprising of earnest women who are devoting their time to show that the sisters that the only way to health and happiness is to dress as nature intends—in soft graceful costumes that allow our muscles full play and will make our bodies strong and beautiful."

Radburn—Did they discover the origin of the fad in that respect?
Chesney—Yes. The editor threw a poem from the poetess of passion in the waste basket.

Too Much So.
Mrs. Pinkin—Jack proved an intelligent and kind husband.

Mrs. Potts—You'd think so, if you could see him some nights when he gets home from the club.

HERALDS OF THE SPRING.

Not Robins, but Gay New Jackets and Wraps Trimmed With Lace.

In this all the mod howling and threatened crusades against big sleeves, "like the poor they are always with us," and if anything, the cloth jackets for this spring season of 90 have bigger and wider sleeves than ever. To be sure, the sleeves drop more, but every girl as much as the fad is required, and from shoulder to elbow they are fairly huge. The shoulder seams are much longer, as though to make it impossible to wear last year's jacket, with any feeling of comfort, and, while to the untrained eye the difference of an inch in the length of the sleeves is really a matter of no moment, to the woman's inner consciousness it makes every whit as much difference as an inch on a man's nose.

Long jackets are not to be worn, so say the leading tailors, but evidently some very smart and cool women have their own ideas on the subject.

The favorite New York model is a very nobby little affair. It is cut quite short, only about four inches or perhaps six by the waist line, and flares out very stiffly. It is made single-breasted and is light and really looks something like the waist of a dress. It has immense round revers, which are slashed at the shoulder line, and which in the back form a sort of sailor collar, round instead of square. It is fastened with fancy buttons of medium size. When worn with a skirt to match it is exceedingly chic, but is not universally becoming, and looks better on young girls than it does on older women. The sleeves drop from shoulder to elbow, are very large, but from elbow to wrist fit quite snugly. This jacket is made of the fancy tweed, serge or corded cloth, and is lined in some fancy satin.

Another style of jacket modeled on the newest coats of last winter has more graceful lines and is more becoming. It is somewhat longer, is very full at the back, but with no unnecessary flaring out over the hips. It is made of the old fashioned loose fronts. The back, which is perfectly fitted, is cut to make the waist look full. The sleeves are not so large as in the shorter jacket, but are of a very good size. The lapels are small and narrow, and at the back there is a turn down collar. It is only open at the neck far enough to show the collar and necktie. This jacket is made in every material possible, is very smart in tan cloth, with a velvet collar let in, but the most satisfactory of all are in black or covert cloth.

The Norfolk jacket, which is all the rage, will be worn as an outside garment, even over skirts of another color. It is made of the old fashioned lines, but the pleats are not all the same size, as was the original fashion, and tapers at the waist, back and front, and in consequence, it is very more becoming, for nothing ugly, particularly if one is at all inclined to stoutness, can well be imagined than these three thick pleats, which make even the smallest waist look square and ugly. Curiously enough, the sleeves of these Norfolk jackets are comparatively small. IRON DUKE CORN CULTIVATOR.Instantly Narrowed or Widened
By turning the Crank.

Fitted with Reversible Steels and Extra Hillers.

Our Improved Iron Duke Corn Cultivator.

This Cultivator has proven a wonderful success. It has had a remarkable sale. We have placed to it an attachment for instantly narrowing or widening the wings by simply turning a crank. This is an improvement of a substantial nature, and will commend itself to purchasers. We have several styles of steels to choose from, but our No. 38, as shown in cut, appears to be the favorite. The Iron Duke is compact, light and strong, is a model of elegance, does the work of 10 men, and is in every way a superior tool. Buy no other. The mechanism for narrowing and widening instantly is ingenious and strong. The wings are held firmly in position. The longer you use this little tool the better you like it.

practical talk, which should have been heard by a wider audience. On motion of was accorded the learned lecturer for his able effort. A unanimous invitation was extended to Mr. Roberts to repeat the lecture at a later date in the year. Rev. R.

committee; H. R. Bedford, umpire. The members of the club have entered upon the season filled with enthusiasm and a firm resolve to leave nothing undone to maintain the good reputation so well earned during the past two or three seasons.Precautionary.It is surprising the number of conflagrations which have occurred in Canada during this year. A great many towns and villages have suffered severely, and the result is that municipal authorities are paying more attention to fire protection. Insurance companies are insisting upon better equipment and organization in order that their own interests may be protected. Our own town council discussed the matter at its last meeting and are taking steps to increase the fire service in this town. One of the most obvious and pressing needs of Deseronto is a fire limit within which no wooden buildings should be erected in the future. A by-law should be passed at the next meeting of council prescribing a district within which all buildings in future should be built of brick, stone or other substantial material.
All the territory south of Thomas street and bounded by Green and Fourth streets on the west and east might, for example, be embraced in this district. A reduction in insurance would probably follow such an action.Gratulent, and see Barnett's $1.47

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Nible's Garden, one of the historic theatres, has seen its last performance. It will be torn down on Monday.

Yvette Guilbert, the French music hall singer, about whom foreign correspondents have marvelled for a year or two, is sailing over next week.

The all conquering Brady will raise from prize fights to come on next year. He has hired Julian Edwards to write the scene of an Irish opera to a libretto by Stanislaus Strange.

Theodore Thomas, the orchestra director, will celebrate his golden jubilee in July. He was born in Hanover sixty years ago, and came to America a lad of ten. He played in New York while a youngster as a kind of a virtuoso.

A St. Louis man has organized a peat-tran dramatic company, which proposes to walk all the way from New York, giving a show every night at some small town by the way, and carrying their scenery, costumes and baggage with them.

There is a good deal in a name some times. Mr. Dabney, who has been singing tenor songs in Daly's company a little while under the name of Danleigh, has now joined the Abbey and Grand opera company to sing tenor parts and will be known as Danleigh, which sounds very French indeed.

Louis Cyr's little daughter recently made her debut as a strong girl in Montreal. She is only seven years old and weighs 65 pounds, yet she lifted two dumbbells of 300 pounds, a 33-pound dumbbell above her head, a 150-pound one with one hand and two weighing 89 with one finger.

ABOUT WOMEN WOMEN.

Lady Florence Dixie has accepted the presidency of the British Ladies' Football Club. The members of the club do not play in fashion's dress, but in knickerbockers, blouses, caps and football boots.

Mrs. H. H. Kison of Boston has been selected to execute for the City of Providence a statue of Ezekiel Hopkins, first admiral of the Revolutionary Navy. Her husband is a sculptor of prominence and she has exhibited some highly creditable work at the Paris Salon.

"The late Lady C. Schreiber was a great patroness of London cabmen," says the London (Eng.) Quaker. "They were indebted to her many years since as the kind donor of the cabmen's shelter outside the Langham Hotel, of which shelter there are forty. One year she invited about 250 to a magnificent tea and entertainment. She was a warm supporter of the Cabdrivers' Benevolent Association."

A NEW WOMAN'S BIBLE.

A REVISION OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES BY WOMEN FOR WOMEN.

It is to Determine Whether They Really Declare That Man is the Master and That Woman Must Obey Him—First Report of Six Years' Work.

A Woman's Bible, translated by a joint committee of distinguished American and English women, is this morning being published under the title of "The Woman's Bible."

The first five books of the Old Testament—Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy—have already been carefully studied, and the position of Woman in the Bible has been fixed with precision.

Six years ago this work began. It has for some time been suspected that a revision of certain portions of the Scriptures would show that woman had not been fairly dealt with by Biblical students. The main question to be determined was whether there was any real basis in the Bible for the assertion that man was the master.

The work of the new committee of women has, they claim, already progressed far enough to show that the Scriptures do not proclaim the superiority of man. The members of the revision committee find on every hand abundant evidence of the absolute equality of the sexes.

And this discovery has raised the question as to how far it will be used to signify this equality of sex. The revisionists paused in their work to debate this point and then proceeded to coin a new word—"Amphicariate."

"Amphicariate," then, will hereafter signify in the translations and reports of the committee, "absolute equality of man and woman."

The title page reads thus: THE WOMAN'S BIBLE. ALL THAT RELATES TO WOMAN IN THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS, WITH COMMENTARIES.

BY A COMMITTEE OF ENGLISH AND AMERICAN WOMEN.

It has been decided by the revisionists not to issue any literal translation of any portions of the Bible until the entire work is completed. The committee has, however, prepared an informal interpretation or paraphrasing of certain important passages, with comment.

It is interesting to know something of the women who have labored patiently and conscientiously as members of the Revision Committee. The venerable leader of this committee is Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, of New York, who is eighty years of age. With Mrs. Stanton have been associated Miss Frances Willard and Lady Somerset, Mrs. Mary Livermore, Rev. Olympia Brown, Rev. Phoebe Hancoford, Sarah A. Underwood, Frances Ellen Burr, Helen Gardner and Miss Frances Lord, of London.

Perhaps the clearest narrative of the work and aims of the revisionists is best told in the words of Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, who said to me the other day:

"Yes, I am writing to tell you whatever I can as to the method of work on the Woman's Bible and its inception. 'Where did the idea originate?' Years ago in my study I always been a careful student of the Bible. I read into woman's work and found that the worst we had was the mistranslation of the Bible, which took away its respect of woman and made her a slave to man."

"As the years went by I saw clearly that this must be combated. The importance grew upon me. My co-workers could not be brought to see it in the same degree of importance as I did. We were busy trying to gain a footing. We temporized to win a following. This is the way it has been continually. Women are politic by nature. They prefer to temporize, and so that course was followed. But we knew that many mistranslations in the Bible did us injury. I felt that we had a claim equality in the church as in the state and that one must necessarily entail the other. I said that women must get together and revise the Bible so far as their position was concerned in it."

"We have never touched questions concerning women. With all the learned touch and commented upon it. To carry out the plan of revision a committee of English and American women was then formed. Among them were many famous names—Mrs. Mary Livermore, Rev. Olympia Brown, Rev. Phoebe Hancoford and Sarah A. Underwood, who was editor of the Open Court and, with her husband, editor of the Index. John Bright's sister, who has since died, was another famous woman who was to have assisted. Frances Ellen Burr of the Hartford Times, and Helen Gardner were others.

"Miss Lord and I went through the Pentateuch, and next year, while in London, assisted by my daughter, Mrs. Blatch, I continued with the same five books, in which are many of the most important passages quoted to establish the inferiority of woman."

"The books of Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy are ready for publication. They will appear probably at the close of a chapter, a week, and the chapters have been made short. The plan is now that the revision shall assume a public form and later be shaped by Hebrew and Greek scholars. No man will have a hand in it."

"While the general revision committee appointed six years ago did not continue with enthusiasm, some of them have done important work and I have their copy. Both Frances Lord and my daughter, Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, of England, assisted me on the Pentateuch."

"It was arranged that the members of the committee should select such portions of the Bible as they preferred. The Rev. Phoebe Hancoford has done a part of the Old Testament which was her choice. Frances Ellen Burr, of Hartford, has also done the section she chose, while others who have assisted are Helen Gardner, who took a part of the Old Testament, and also Mrs. Livermore."

"The personnel of the committee has varied from time to time, and I am now in communication with a number of most important women, some of whom are unable to assist in the further revision, and others who, from the offices they fill in various organizations, do not dare to appear in such a connection, although they see the necessity of the work."

"Mrs. Stanton expects that at the briefest it will require two years for the completion and publication of the Woman's Bible. We thus appears a very short time in comparison with the years required for the revision of the New Testament last made by men, it is easily explained by comparison with the amount of work to be done. There is no intention of tampering with anything which does not concern woman directly. It is not the women of the Bible, but woman in the Bible. And in some cases the men who married them have been brought in."

Crying as a Symptom of Disease.

To tell the nature of a young child's ailment is not always easy even for the most experienced physician. Sometimes it is quite impossible to make the necessary examination, especially if the child is crying and hysterical. In such cases the crying of the child is a symptom of disease. The crying of sick children, however, there are many peculiarities which, when carefully noted, lead to correct conclusions. Dr. Hill, a Canadian physician, gives some points of value in this regard that will assist a parent who may be compelled to depend upon herself for at least the early care of her baby.

In pneumonia and capillary bronchitis the cry is moderate and peevish and muffled, as if the door were shut between child and hearer. The cry of croup is hoarse, hoarse and metallic, with a crowing inspiration. That of cerebral disease, particularly hydrocephalus, is short, sharp, shrill, and solitary. Manic and tubercular peritonitis are manifested by moaning and wailing. Obstinate, passionate, and long-continued crying tells of earache, thirst, hunger, or intestinal troubles, or the pricking of a pin. The pleuritic cry is louder and shriller than the pneumatic, and is evoked by moving the child or on coughing. The cry of intestinal ailments is often accompanied by wriggling and writhing before defecation, an indication that the nature of the ailment is to be interpreted. Exhaustion is manifested with a white, crying only, or just after coughing, indicates pain caused by the act. The rest or quiescent part of the cry grows weaker toward the fatal end of all disease, while the absence of crying during disease is often of greater import than its presence, as it shows exhaustion and loss of power. Loud, intense screaming sometimes tells of gravel.—Phrenological Journal.

A Hint Worth Remembering.

Often you have flowers with stems so short that there is not a dish in the house that will stay in. The best way to try this scheme: Cut a piece of wide-meshed net just big enough to fit inside a jar or bowl. Fill it with water and stick the flowers in through the meshes.

The Old Man Was Canny.

A Durham man, aged seventy-three, visited a Newcastle lawyer (a bachelor) for advice upon making his will. The old man's property consisted of two small cottages, which had cost him £150, and a little furniture.

The lawyer, having asked his client how he wished to dispose of his property, the latter replied: "Ma old woman hes to her all as long as she's my widow. After that ma beatus gets all."

"What age is your old woman?" asked the lawyer.

"Seventy-two," replied the minor.

"And how long have you and your wife been married?" asked the lawyer.

"Over fifty years," replied the minor.

Through the lawyer suggested to his client that he should give the wife the interest during her life, whether she continued a widow or otherwise.

"Himny, as we weds, 'a'll hev ma an' way," said the minor.

"But surely," replied the lawyer, "you don't expect your old woman, now seventy-two years old, would marry again after your death?"

The minor, looking the lawyer full in the face, answered with much solemnity: "Wey, himny, ther's no knowing what young chaps like yerself will do for money."—Pearson's Weekly.

Changing One's Style of Dress.

The woman with a talent for dress says: "A great number of women ruin their appearance by not changing their style of dress when nature changes their style of face. A woman does not keep one style all her life; she starts out blonde and this, with time, becomes darker and darker in effect and becomes broader and stouter; but ten to one she clings passionately to the colors and general character of gown and bonnet that were always becoming to her. She is a lost woman. She is sure to look passe. It is a great thing not to fall into a rut in clothes; but with sin ye will at the present effect of the things you cry on."

SPRING'S HEADGEAR.

A SUBJECT WHICH INTERESTS WOMANKIND ALL OVER.

Straight Ties or Straw Hats—New Shapes in Straw—A Matter of Bonnet Strings—Trimings That Trim—and Those That Don't.

This time the announcement is found in the calendar of fashion. At this time look for spring hats. They are chiefly characterized by size and showiness. The chief exception to this are the sailor hats and Tan caps, the latter of which are made of material to match the gown and are entirely correct. It is even said that some of the latest styles of an elaborate mob cap is to appear in gingham, lawn and duck to go with summer gowns of the same materials. Then a woman will be asked to wear her entire rig to the wash-tub hat and all.

The other exception to the rule, the sailor, is not so far from the law after all. It is always sizeable, it has caught the infection for highly wrought trimmings and comes out with its one-time plainness produced by a thoroughly dignified brim is round, of the same width everywhere and curved up a little. The crown is rather low. This style of sailor is almost entirely discarded. The trimmings in ways trimmed, the trimmings starting in front and extending to the sides. There is none at the back. A bow of crisp satin ribbon and a handsome trim on the front is the usual trimming. A pretty wing is sometimes tucked under the last loop on each side, the point of the wing pointing upward, and an upright trim plume or egrette, stands immediately in front of the hat.

The specially correct material for such a hat for early spring—right away in your eye like—is a smooth felt with a wide edge of mixed rough straw about the brim and an insertion of straw in the crown. The favorite shade for the felt is rich brown, the straw being mixed brown yellow and red. The bows of ribbon will be brown, the wings will be scarlet and the front egrette or plume will be black. Such a hat is suitable for the street and will go charmingly with the perfectly plain tailor-made wisely chosen for first spring wear. In some cases the hat, on the side of the brim is faced with satin ribbon of some bright shade, preferably coral.

The sort of glorified sailor that has been described is seen in the initial picture, but the other illustration is devoted to a more kind. There is no reason for losing hope because the hat and the hat must have piquancy and an air of freshness, for there are few startling changes in styles. The pliable cloth of former seasons will be again used, and the base of the crown and the beginning of the brim will be a becoming feature of spring hats. A rule brims will be turned up, and a jaunty deviation from the perpendicular may add style by giving a little tilt to the hat as it is being worn. In general is flat, with one uplifting plumes, egrette or upstanding loops, this embellishment to come wherever it is most becoming to the wearer, as a rule a little at the side and back.

A charming model that conforms to these general rules and is stylish without being unbecomingly so, is of a butter-color chip, the rosettes are a corn color and the bright green leaves and scarlet berries are exact copies of the little bunchberry plant. The plumes are making the woods bright. The feathers are black. The hat ties on with narrow brown velvet strings that cross over the chin and fasten just under the ear, the end finishing in rosettes to match those on the hat. This will be one of the new features of the spring English walking hats. At the back of this hat, close against the base of the turned-back brim, is a bunch of the polished green leaves and the scarlet berries. The hair of a girl who wears such a hat should be as clear and rich a brown as the velvet of the rosettes.

Time was when the shape of the hat itself was the important thing, and when, once selected with care and pride, it was then adorned by the trimming. But as time is changed and now the hat really hardly counts, save as a support to the trimming. If the shape of the hat seems modestly out of fashion, do this there being some compensation in the fact that the wearer gains an air of exactness and tailor-made neatness.

In general, feathers and lace will predominate in the trimmings of spring hats, but they will be followed by a showing of bloom on summer hats that will be really surprising. Big hats all in bloom will be the July rule, according to the present outlook. The hats of last year will renew its popularity, to a considerable degree because too many women rushed into the fashion late last season not to insure a big stock of the pattern already in the hands of the public. These will be brought out again for a second season's wear, freshened up for the first time now. This style of hat is especially becoming to women who are wearing their hair in a bun, and it is quite the little curl in the middle of the forehead. The hat has a tendency to make a girl look a little older, but many of the present fashions do this there being some compensation in the fact that the wearer gains an air of exactness and tailor-made neatness.

PROFESSIONAL NURSES.

Many of Them Earn from Twenty One Dollars a Week Upwards.

Nursing as a profession is not a new field for women, but inquiry it has been found that the demand for trained nurses far exceeds the supply. This fact ought to be of interest to those who are asking: "What can a woman do to earn her own living?" Many of the professions have become so overcrowded that the chances of obtaining a position are very small unless the young woman has influence to work in her behalf. A good trained nurse is almost certain to be engaged all the time, and the possession of a diploma from any first-class training school is a guarantee that the graduate can earn a livelihood and in most cases a very handsome one.

This is a profession to which many of the past century have given their lives. Who has not heard of Florence Nightingale? Here is her recommendation of nursing: "I give one-quarter of a century's European experience when I say that the happiest people, the fondest of their occupation, the most thankful for their lives are in my opinion those engaged in sick nursing." Surely it is no small privilege where work is so well paid as in a hospital, and one that is free from close competition.

It is a mistake to think that it is a waste of time and money to obtain an education before entering upon hospital work. The cultivation of the mind is of no less value to a trained nurse than to woman engaged in other pursuits, and a well-educated, even a college-educated woman can do more, and gain more in consequence. Nursing pays better than almost any other work a woman can do at the present time engaged; but let no young woman take it up solely on this account. It must in itself possess an attraction. The successful nurse must first love the labor. It is not easy, but very hard first, when one is mastering the principles which lie at the basis of all good nursing. There ought to be a natural ability for nursing and a strong inclination to help the sick combined at the start, but after the curious, steady work will count for more than any so-called genius. The nurse whose heart is not in her work will pass many a weary day from which a little forethought would have saved her. But if a girl thinks that she has a liking and taste for the work, then by all means let her go in and use every opportunity to fit herself for it.

Twenty-one years ago it was said that no refined, educated woman could go through the training required to make her a trained nurse, that peculiar power of our hospitals of any importance is without its training school. Few people realize the value of skillful nursing. It is essential to the success of every hospital, and there is no physician who would not be glad to have such care for all his patients.

A hospital-trained nurse is a luxury beyond the majority of people, and she earns anywhere from $21 a week and upward; this outside her board, lodging and washing, of course.

The height of good nursing consists in what is done for the patient's comfort outside of the doctor's orders; the ready tact, patience, that peculiar power of soothing pain and suffering, the knowing just what to do at just the right time. The nurse must have good, sound health; be truthful, honest, and unswerving in habit of neatness and punctuality, kind-hearted, and refined.—American Agriculturist.

Hints About Sleep.
Never awaken a person who is ill even to give him medicine unless by definite instruction from his physician. It is bad to sleep in such a way that the light will strike the eyes before it is time to wake in the morning. It is unwise to go to bed late and get up early, and it is unwise to retire immediately after a heavy meal.

Cheese Pudding.
Mix a pint of fine bread crumbs with a small cupful of grated cheese and add a tablespoonful of butter and salt and mix well. Put on a fire and cook for two to four well-beaten eggs mixed with a large cupful of milk; beat briskly together, turn into a buttered dish and bake in a hot oven about forty minutes or until the pudding is set and the surface brown and crackling. This is an excellent supper dish, or a supplementary dinner dish when you have a light meat course.—Country Gentleman.

Scalloped Tomatoes.
Take one quart of tomatoes and season with one teaspoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper, a teaspoonful each of sugar and onion juice, one heaping tablespoonful of minced parsley and a tablespoonful of butter. Butter a deep dish and sprinkle with fine crumbs. Pour in the tomatoes, cover the top with fine bread crumbs and bits of butter. Bake in a hot oven about an hour and a half to two hours.—Boston Budget.

Eggs a l'italienne.
Boil six eggs twenty minutes. Remove the shells and cut in dice. Melt one tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan, add a pinch of salt and a little milk, and stir with boiling milk, stirring constantly until it is about the consistency of thick cream. Add the diced eggs, a dash of salt and pepper and the eggs. Boil up at once and serve.—Farm and Fireside.

THE MODEL HOSTESS.

TACT AND CALMNESS HER TWO ESSENTIAL REQUISITES.

Amusement and Flurry on Her Part Not Only Bad For Her, But Very Uncomfortable To Guests.—The Beauty of Imperturbable Calm.

A woman may possess wealth untold, and may have many of the best and the brightest of minds, but unless she has absolute control of her feelings there will be sometime in her career as a hostess that she will display annoyance or flurry, and the contagion spreading to her guests will cause an otherwise successful entertainment to disintegrate into a failure. A model hostess must, to all appearances, be made of stone, so far as disagreeable happenings are concerned. Even though a guest or careless waiter inadvertently breaks a bit of china which can never be replaced, she must smile on as though the loss of the article was nothing but a trifling annoyance. Her well-bred calm inspires her guests with a feeling of confidence, and though in her heart she may be very dubious about certain important details of her dinner or dance, if she does not show her anxiety, everything will pass off to a happy conclusion.

A flurried hostess or nervous host, whose countenances but ill conceal the worry they feel, can do more toward making the guests uncomfortable than if the soup were served stone cold and the salad dressing were ruined by a too bountiful quantity of vinegar. An imperturbable calm and a ready tact are the two important factors in the making of a model hostess. Secure these by book or example, and you need never fear for the success of any of your entertainments.—Philadelphia Times.

HANDY SEWING BASKET.

Easily and Quickly Made at Home at Small Expense.

In the bottom of a light, round willow basket thirteen inches in diameter by three inches deep, is fitted a circle of cloth, the bottom of the basket, lined with silk over a thin layer of wadding. This is all the lining required. Around the upper part of the basket inside, nine small, round buttons, a pincushion and a shirred pocket, are fastened all in a row. The nine spoons (No. 30, 35, 40, 45, 50, 55, 60, 65, 70, 75, 80, 85, 90, 95, 100) and each strung on a piece of ribbon half an inch wide by at least fourteen inches long. Each ribbon end is brought through to the outside of the basket just below the brim. The dainty pincushion, two inches square, and the thimble pocket of the same material, have ribbon ties tacked with tiny bows to their upper corners. These are also passed through to the outside where by tying the eleven pairs of ribbon ends into neat bows the trimming of the basket is completed.

A HANDY SEWING BASKET.

Arranged in this way the threads cannot become tangled, an empty spool is easily replaced and there is plenty of room left for all the other necessary furnishings of our handy sewing basket.—American Agriculturist.

SOME NOVEL NAPERIES.

Banquets Which Are Spread Upon a Velvet Cloth of Gold.

An effective lunch cloth recently was of the thickest, smoothest, finest damask of a pure gold color. It was dappled with a leafy design, also in the gold, the pattern being perceived only by the wearing of the fabric. No other color was permitted on the table, the service being done in white, while the flowers were white, and the walls, the whole effect was a table covered with profuse, sanitate that Tennyson talks so much about on a sheet from the Field of Cloth of Gold.

Unless a hostess can indulge in such rare magnificence, however, a plain white luncheon cloth is always in the best taste. Just now it is the fashion to have them hemmed and bordered with drawn-work, though not too elaborately, as anything pronounced, unless it be of the most elegant description, is out of place upon the table. A fairly good quality of damask, 24 yards long and with a net little drawn-work border, may be purchased.

For those who prefer colored luncheon cloths there are extremely attractive ones in dull blue, old rose and yellow, and these have, as we have said, as durability to recommend them, for they cost but $13 or $14 in the two and a half and three yard lengths. The latest such thing is a pattern in which the outlines of all sorts is the scroll pattern.—N.Y. World.

The French Woman's Way.

Here lies one of the great secrets of the French woman's success in matters of dress. She studies her characteristics and peculiarities, and then chooses her gowns and mantles accordingly. If a style that is out of fashion, she adapts it to the outlines of her figure, then put it to one side and choose instead something less novel that will add to your charms instead of detracting from them. If a color that is the rage does not suit your complexion, or the color of your hair or eyes, discard it. In fact, the latest fashion is that which will enhance your good points instead of clashing with your natural coloring. If it is your late style of dressing the hair does not harmonize with the outline of your head don't have anything to do with it.

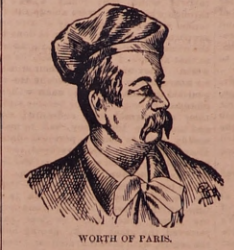

Temperature of Curling Tongs.

A great deal of hair is ruined by curling tongs being too hot. The beautiful, soft little curls at a lower temperature, and by taking a little more time the curls are just as good.

THE LATE MR. WORTH.

Measured by the Standards of Success He Reached a High Place.

Charles Frederick Worth, the famous man milliner and dressmaker, who died, having passed on to that far country where his services will not be in request, a victim of the dread influenza now raging so virulently in foreign capitals. By his death the gay city of Paris where he has reigned without a rival since Eugene's time will lose one of its most prominent fascinations for female tourists. Scarcely any woman of wealth or fashion has dreamed her four in foreign parts a complete success unless she brought back by her gowns, hats or other articles of costume designed and executed in his studio. In some respects he resembled the late Ward McAllister. He was an artist, however, he was clearly superior to McAllister. The latter knew, none better, what men and women should wear, what designs were successful and what fashions were perfect. Worth knew all this, and not only knew it, but he could conceive the designs and then execute them. To this extent he was an artist, and he was supreme in his realm. The woman who thought she knew what she wanted better than he did, she was a fool, and he was a fool. There are other such dressmakers, but they have not reached his heights. It was only necessary to have the stamp of Worth upon one's gown in order to secure universal respect and envy. Probably in his long career he turned out many designs that were no better than those designed and created by others, but this made no difference so long as they were produced by Worth. It was as much a hobby to doubt the perfection of a dress made by Worth as it would be to belittle a score by Boethius or a picture by Raphael. The signature at one lifted it above criticism. In his time Worth had a long and brilliant career. Women of wealth and fashion, brides and widows, countesses and duchesses, queens and princesses, actresses and prime dancers have thronged his studio and bent around him in a glory which might be unlike that of the likes of the field, and yet was both fascinating and powerful in its influence, for how many actresses and singers have relied upon Worth's ravishing stage costumes for their success, and how many more who never saw Worth have clandestinely used his name to draw troops to the theatres and make a popular success! No man living, poet, prose writer, artist, singer or actor, has ever had such an influence upon the world of high society as this dead gown-maker. He has been the adoration of those who could afford to patronize him, while those who could not have lived upon his name, and he has been the place would come in whereupon they would sail away to Paris and visit that atelier whence issued such ravishing costumes. Worth's calling was not a very exact one, for a man, but measured by the standards of success he reached a high place. He was easily at the top of his profession, and as the practice of his profession did call for some artistic knowledge and some sense of the beautiful, his rise and his pinnacle where he sat lonely were not to lightly regarded or to be easily predicted. While it is somewhat of calamity to lose a man like Worth, who had done so small work in helping to beautify the world, there is no question that the world will be filled, as among his lieutenants there are those who by long experience are fitted to fill it. It is one of the compensations of that no man is irreplaceable. Other geniuses will appear in the world of fashion, and some one else long will dominate it as supremely as did Worth. Meanwhile it will be, by his sense at least, a relief that stage performers of the female sex can no longer assert their artistic excellence because their gowns were made by Worth.

WORTH OF PARIS.

Worth was always looked upon as a Frenchman, but in reality he was an Englishman, born in Lincolnshire, and his full name—which one never heard—was Charles Frederick Worth. In 1840, when he was fifteen years old, he went to work in a London dry-goods store, and five or six years later entered the service of a Paris silk-merchant. Here he began modelling cloaks. In 1858 he set up, in a small way, his famous establishment on the Rue de la Paix, and remained there until he died.

When he began he employed fifty hands; when he died 1,300 hands were at work in the establishment, and during each year from 6,000 to 7,000 gowns were made, and from 3,000 to 4,000 cloaks. Every reigning queen except Victoria in the civilized world bought his "creations" at one time or another, it is said. The Empress Eugenie was probably his best customer among royalty, and Americans paid him the most money.

Materials for Cushions.

Suitable materials for the covers of pillows are legion. Pieces of last summer's silk can be used, and for a beautiful cushion there is nothing better than the front of one of those tea-gown patterns which were used a few years ago, and which were once in vogue in French designs and colorings. At any Japanese store can be found a variety of printed cotton crepes of all colors, or of finely embroidered oriental silks, ranging from twenty-five cents a yard to any amount you may be willing to pay. A new material is chiffon, a ridged cotton goods, woven of threads of different shades of the same color. It is thirty-six inches wide, and but twenty-five cents a yard. It is used in making the cover and ruffle for a large pillow. At several shops they are already made up in greens, dull pinks and blues or yellows.

Waterproof Walking Skirt.

It is advisable that one should have one petticoat to be used exclusively for walking, and this may be had for a little more than the cost of a waterproof cloth. There will then be almost perfect protection for the feet and ankles when wet weather. It is the wearing of damp clothing about the feet that constitutes most of the discomfort of a rainy day expedition, and the waterproof lining does away with this.

ADVICE TO OWNERS OF HORSES.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR SCRATCHES, GREASE HEEL, ETC.

A man you all know, and a man of experience gives the following:—

"I have used Dr. COLEMAN'S PASTE for scratches and grease heel on horses. In my stable, and from principle alone must say it is the only remedy I have ever found that will cure. I have tried everything I could get, but without success. Dr. COLEMAN'S PASTE, being a new preparation and highly recommended, I determined to try it. On the 25th cent I applied the worst case of grease heel ever in my stable inside three days. I consider it just what all livermen require. Try it once."

THE DANGER OF CHESS.

Dr. Blackburne, the English chess champion, regards the game as a dangerous intellectual vice which is spreading to rather an alarming extent. Discussing the matter after his game with Mr. Bardeleben on Thursday, he said: "I know a lot of people who hold the view that chess is an excellent means of training the mind in logic and shrewd calculation, provision and caution, but I don't think they are right. Chess is just as fallible and foolish as other folks who don't know a rook from a pawn. But even if it were a form of mental discipline, which I doubt, I should still object to it on the ground of its fatal fascination. Chess is a mental alcohol. It intoxicates the man who plays it constantly. He lives in a chess atmosphere and his dreams are of gambits and the end of games. I have known many an able man spoiled by chess. The game has charms and as a consequence, has given up everything to the charmer. No, unless a man has supreme self control, it is better that he should not learn to play chess. I have never allowed my children to learn it, for I have seen too much of its evil results. Draughts is a better game if you must have a game."

DEATH OF MR. JOHN MASON, OF TELEGRAPH ISLAND.

Mr. John Mason, the well known keeper of the lighthouse on Telegraph Island, Bay of Quinte, passed away at nine o'clock on the morning Sunday, April 28th. Deceased who had reached the advanced age of 89 years was born at Massawassa Point, township of Ameliasburg, Prince Edward, and was the son of William Mason who was of Scotch descent. When he was fourteen years of age he removed to Sophiasburg where he resided to the time of his death. For some time he followed the occupation of weaver and subsequently that of a cooper. In November 1870 he was appointed keeper of the lighthouse at Telegraph Island, the post of which position he held with satisfaction of navigators and the department at Ottawa. He had been always a healthy man but paralysed in some time ago and ultimately came to his death. His aged partner in life only passed away on the 18th of April previous in her eighty-third year. A sister, Mrs. John Reddick, of Sidney is the only member left of a large family of brothers and sisters. Deceased is survived by the following children: John, Napanee; Road, Richmond; township; Jacob M. Mason, Riverdale; Hants Co., Nova Scotia; and Isabella Ann Mason his daughter who has been such an example of filial duty in her care of her aged parents. His son Edward died about four years ago at Avon, Montana, and two daughters died when quite young. Deceased was one of the wisest men in the district and was honest and upright in all his dealings. He was a member of the Methodist church of which place he was very numerous attendance. Religious services were conducted at the Methodist church, Simoesville, by Rev. R. V. Marsh, after which the remains were interred in the Laker cemetery, near Northport.

THE WEALTH OF ENGLAND.

Highly important and significant are the figures, just issued, with comparisons, showing the wealth of England in spite of twenty long years of depression. The taxable property of England and Wales in 1894 was £16,000,000,000, compared to £104,000,000,000 in 1870. This increase of more than fifty per cent has taken place when the taxable value of land has decreased within fifteen years from about $600,000,000 to $330,000,000. The land formed in 1870 about one-half the taxable property of the country. It is now little more than one-fifth.

WITH FIRE CHISELS.

Thirty Pounds of Stone Broken by One Pound of Wood.

At Bangalore, Southern India, the quarrying of granite slabs by means of wood fire has been brought to such a perfection that an account of the method is interesting. The rock forms solid masses uninterrupted by cracks for several hundred feet, and is quarried over an area as treated as follows: A narrow line of wood fire, perhaps seven feet long, is gradually elongated, and at the same time moved forward over the tolerably even surface of solid rock. The line of fire is produced by dry logs of light wood, which have been burnt in their position until smokes with a hammer indicates that the rock in front of the fire has become detached from the mass underneath.

The burning wood is then pushed forward a few inches, and left until the hammer again indicates that the slit has extended.

Thus the fire is moved on, and at the same time the length of the line of fire is increased, and the work is done by the side of the fresh rock, the maximum length of the fire is amounting to about twenty-five feet. It is only on this advancing line of fire that any blasting takes place, the rest of the fire has been traveling being left to itself. This latter portion is covered with the ash left by the wood, and with thin splinters which have been burst off.

These splinters are only of about one-eighth of an inch in thickness and a few inches across. They are quite independent of the general splitting of the rock, which is all the time going on at a depth of twelve inches from the surface.

The burning lasts eight hours, and the line of the fire advances at the average rate of nearly six feet an hour. The area actually passed over by the line of fire is 400 feet, but as the crack extends about three feet on either side beyond the fire the area of the entire slab which is set free measures about 740 square feet. All this is done with, may be, about fifteen hundredweight of wood. Taking the average thickness of the stone at five inches, and its specific gravity as 2.5, the result is thirty pounds of stone quarried with one pound of wood—Nature.

LOOKING AHEAD.

Thoughtful Mamma Kept the Floor Walker on Fire and Nerves.

It was a little dried-up, stock-shouldered, thick-lipped, white-eyed, black woman who went into a big dry goods emporium the other day and said to the affable floor walker as he met her at the door: "Got any yarn knitting thread?"

"Yes, step this way, please," said the old woman, leading the floor walker by the coat tails, much to the amusement of all the clerks who began to gather around her to see a fun, says the Philadelphia "Inquirer."

"I want a little of that. Got any pins or cotton thread or silk dresses or par-sols or bleached termoste or blue ribbon or pillar cases or undershirts or sevin' mending or bustles or crimping pins or table cloths or—"

"Step this way and I will show you what we have," interposed the floor walker. "Just what you want about to break down, but she had only paused for breath."

A French Scientist Believes that Argon may be the Food of Bacteria.

A French scientist is making investigations regarding the part the newly discovered gas "argon" plays towards bacteria. The new gas, which has long been a part of our atmosphere without our knowing it, has been combined with oxygen, hydrogen, chlorine, phosphorus, sulphur, potassium, sodium and iron, and the results without any result. So far as the scientist can ascertain, "argon" has no effect chemically upon the higher animals, but it may, however, be of great importance to the nourishment of bacteria, and this is what he proposes to find out.

Supposing "argon" not to be necessary to man and necessary to bacteria, sterilization will be rendered much easier and the door be opened to all sorts of bacteriological possibilities.

DEATH OF MRS. CHARLES DRISCOLL OF MARYSVILLE.

It was with general regret that people in this district heard of the death of Mrs. Charles Driscoll, of Marysville, the sad event having occurred at six o'clock, on the morning of Saturday, April 27th. The deceased lady had been in poor health for some time, and on her return home was taken with a sore throat which took a serious form, her condition becoming critical. She is survived by her husband, who is in ill health, and by six children, two sons and four daughters, the youngest about eleven years of age. The deceased, whose maiden name was Catherine Drummy, was the daughter of the late Nicholas Drummy, one of the pioneers of Tyendinaga, who settled in the township in 1838. Her mother, who has reached the advanced age of ninety years, still survives. The funeral which took place on Sunday afternoon at St. Mary's church, was largely attended, over eighty rigs being in the procession. Rev. Father Chabert officiated at the service. The bereaved family have general sympathy in their great affliction.

THE ARMENIAN OUTRAGES.

London, May 7.—Two thousand persons attended the meeting which was held in St. James Hall London, May 7, to protest against the alleged Turkish outrages in Armenia. The Duke of Argyll presided and among the speakers were the Duke of Westminster, the Bishop of St. Asaph, the Bishop of Hereford, and Lady Herby Somerset. Mr. Gladstone sent to the Duke of Argyll a letter expressing sympathy with the movement. It says: "It is with the sincerest grief that I view the infatuation of the Turkish Government, which is determined to do everything possible to produce its own ruin. The Duke of Argyll is a man of noble and noble character, and I feel confident that England will not shrink from it and that France and Russia will firmly co-operate. I hope that by moral means it is possible, but by other means rather than at all, ample security will be taken against a fresh resort by the Sultan and his advisers to these deeds of shame. The reading of Mr. Gladstone's letter elicited enthusiastic applause. Resolutions were adopted condemning the Turkish atrocities and demanding reforms in the government of Armenia.

PRaise FROM GENERAL HERBERT.

Hon. A. R. Dickey, Minister of Militia laid on the table of the House on Monday the annual report of the department. A noticeable feature of the report is that Major General Herbert is much more complimentary to the militia than is his wont. In concluding his report the Major General says: "From the knowledge I have acquired, in the course of four years of intimate acquaintance with the Canadian Militia, I will venture to assert that no body exists, in which there is a stronger feeling of patriotism and loyalty, than in that which I have the honor to command. The sacrifices made annually, by all ranks, should be a sufficient proof of this fact, even for those who have not had the advantage, that I have enjoyed, of an intimate personal acquaintance with all ranks. It is in view of the endeavours so generously made, to safeguard this important part of the Empire, that I can venture to urge the adoption of a system of discipline, by which alone can the security of any country be assured."

VICTIMS OF PERSECUTION.

RESULTS OF SCIENTIFIC EXAMINATION OF THE HAWKS, THE OWL, AND OTHER BIRDS.

Washington, May 4.—Dr. C. Hart Merriam, chief of the division of ornithology of the Agricultural Department, has been for several years engaged in examining and analyzing the contents of the stomachs of hawks, owls, crows, blackbirds, meadow-larks, and other birds of North America which are supposed to be habitually beneficial or injurious to the crops of farmers. The results in some cases have been remarkable, showing in several instances the effects of certain birds were wholly mistaken, and that they have been the victims of an unjust persecution. This has been found to be the case with the crow, the owl, and the hawk, for the slaughter of which many states give bounties. Ninety-five percent of their food was found to be field mice, grasshoppers, crickets, and other insects, which were infinitely more injurious to farm crops than they.

A bulletin now about going to press on the crow also shows that bird is not so black as he is painted by the farmer. The charges against the crow were that he ate the corn, the wheat, the clover, and the wild birds. Examination showed that they eat noxious insects and other animals, and that although twenty-five percent of their food is corn, it is mostly eaten or picked up in the fall and winter. With regard to eggs it was found that the shells were eaten to a very large extent, and that they were found in the stomachs of crows, hawks, and other birds. The crows are also found to be very useful birds in this country.

SIEGE OF CHITRAL.

London, May 3.—In a long despatch from Chitral the details of the siege of that place, in which the British agent at Gilgit, Surgeon-Major Robertson, shut himself up with his escort of the British and native Indian troops, when Sher Afzal captured Chitral. The garrison had supplies which, on short rations, would have lasted until the middle of June. But they had little or no meat and were reduced to eating horseflesh. The Sepoys when relieved looked like corpses and the officers were pale and worn, but they were confident of being able to last it out, although they could have done so only with terrible privation. The discipline and steadiness, as well as the enthusiasm of the Sikhs, is described as magnificent. Upon one occasion those who were in the hospital rushed out to the front to take part in the defence. The despatch pictures the main action, which was fought on April 17. Captain Toward, who was killed, was killed by a bullet which struck him in the chest, and he died a few minutes later. The enemy has been playing tom-toms in a summer house outside of the fort, which they had captured, and it is believed that the tom-toms were used to keep up the noise of the siege.

After careful listening, a faint sound of a pickaxe was heard about ten feet from the south-east tower. Thereupon Lieut. Hargreave and a party consisting of forty Sikhs and sixty Kashmiri troops were told off to a rally, and with them 150 pounds of gunpowder, with which to blow up the mine, the door of the garden gate was exploded. The fort was opened quietly and the rallying party rushed out with fixed bayonets. There was a few struggling shots and the enemy's mine was blown up. Thirty-five of the enemy were bayoneted as they came out of the mine. The powder bags were then laid and the mine was blown up. The rallying party afterwards hurried back to the fort, having lost eight killed and thirteen wounded. The enemy's loss in men, nearly all of whom were killed.

MODERN LONDON.

London, England, means business. That corporation, the strongest on earth, believes now in municipal control. Individual and corporations have already tread too long on the people. Application has been made to the House of Commons, and the House of Commons has authorized the London Council to buy up the water works companies at a cost of $175,000,000. The sunlight is peeping over the horizon. British have been slaves all along while singing their national songs of boasted liberty and freedom.

THAT TRENTON CASE.

The conduct of a collector of taxes and his sureties for not making a return according to statute was the main issue in Trenton v. Dyre, in which the Supreme Court has given judgment. The defence was that the collector had not received a roll certified by the clerk, and that the Supreme Court has argued, namely, whether the provision in section 120 of the Assessment Act, 1892, that the roll is to be certified by the clerk, is directory or imperative. And that the collector could not act without the certificate. This view was sustained.

CANNIBAL SNAKE DEAD.

The fate of the unfortunate snake-constructer who was swallowed inadvertently by his friend and fellow snake in the Zoological gardens last October will be fresh in the minds of all. It was very interestingly eating a pigeon which had been given it for supper when the other which had despatched its bird rather hurriedly and then forgotten that he had supposed happened to turn its head to its companion and found the hind part of the dove still sticking out of its jaws. The snake must have been meant for him, he commenced swallowing the bird. The other decided not to let go, and the result was that the snake was killed. The pigeon under the pigeon ended and the snake began, he went on eating until at last, when too late, he found that he had been eating his companion as well as his supper. The terrible deed seems to have preyed on his mind considerably. For a time he lay motionless and prostrate with grief. Then he tried to regain some of his former cheerfulness, but without avail and after gradually pining away since last October he now expired. The end was not due to the other disagreeing with him internally. On the contrary, he died of indigestion.—London Telegraph.

AN OLD LADY'S STORY.

A SUFFERER FOR YEARS FROM KIDNEY AND LIVER TROUBLES.

LOST HER APPETITE AND SUFFERED FROM LAMENESS IN THE BACK AND SORENESS THROUGHOUT THE BODY—DESPITE ADVANCED YEARS SHE IS AGAIN HEALTHY AND BEAUTIFUL.

Scotland is the name of a pretty little village in the county of Brunt, twelve miles from Brantford. One of the oldest residents of the village is Mrs. Mary Bowman, widow of the late James Bowman, and to say that she is known to every person in the community and to many outside the county is to state a simple fact. A reporter of the Expositor, who recently had occasion to visit the village, was informed that Mrs. Bowman is a member of the numerous army of sufferers made well by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and interviewed her with a view to telling the particulars.

Mrs. Bowman is now nearly forty years of age, but from all appearances is enjoying the best of health and little fair to be spared to see more years than the three-score and ten. Her story can best be given in her own words. She said:—"I have been afflicted with liver and kidney troubles for many years past, and a year ago this spring I was nearly used up and barely able to do anything. The symptoms of my troubles were lameness in the back and sores all through the body. I had a kind of neuralgia in my head nearly all the time, and my appetite was so bad that for relief I had tried many remedies, but they were of no assistance, and I continued to be troubled with these severe pains.

One day a lady friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I purchased a couple of boxes. While taking these my appetite returned and my lameness disappeared so much so, I then purchased seven more boxes and continued taking them and continually felt an improvement, and by the time I had used up the pills I was enjoying better health than I had done for years, and I am now entirely free from aches and pains."

OF INTEREST TO RUPTURED PERSONS.

We would call the attention of those of our readers who are afflicted, or parents having children so afflicted, to the fact that J. Y. He will be prepared to treat all who may call upon him, even the most difficult case being solicited. For the past few years he has been a specialty of cases actually given up by others as hopeless, even curing a large percentage of desperate cases. Remember that advice which an examination will cost you nothing. You will thus know your exact condition, and at the hands of a master in his profession. This also should be of vital interest to those interested. It is possible another opportunity may not present itself. Note the date.

THE SUN BEHIND THE CLOUD.

In the azure summer heavens, When the sun had sunk to rest, And the fading crimson sunset, Faintly glowed all the west, Rolled the evening vapors upward, By the sun behind the cloud, And the masses rolling upward, Curtained all the western sky, And I silent stood, and musing, Watched the sun behind the cloud, Fading slowly from the heavens, While the evening zephyr sigh, But behind the cloudy curtains, While the evening zephyr sigh, Golden through the misty shroud, And the dying day was lighted, Sad foreboding on its road, Still to light our dying hour, Shines the sun behind the cloud.

Joy Brought to Another Home

SUFFERING AND PAIN BASHED.

Paine's Celery Compound Saves the Life of a Toronto Lady.

Mrs. J. Wickett says: "After Using Two Bottles of the Compound I Feel Like a New Woman."

A FIRMLY ESTABLISHED FACT.

When Doctors Fail and Ordinary Medicines are Useless, Paine's Celery Compound Always Cures.

Results! honest results! marvelous results! convincing and satisfying to all fair minded men and women. Even the skeptics and scoffers are brought to a knowledge of the truth by unassailable, rock-bottom facts and proven results. In the vast field of medicine and medical preparations, time, experience and results have amply demonstrated the truth of the oft-repeated statement that Paine's Celery Compound is the only true and honest life-saving medicine ever offered to suffering humanity.

The strong and vigorous testimony of Mrs. J. Wickett, of 169 Oak street, Toronto, should fill the fainting and despairing hearts of all sufferers with fresh hopes and confidence, and should at once lead every sickly person to the only medicine that makes people well.

Mrs. Wickett's letter reads as follows:—

"Last year, in the month of November, I was suddenly taken very ill with pleurisy and neuralgia. The pains in my shoulders and back were most intense, and caused me extreme suffering. For several weeks I was under the doctor's care, and gradually recovered from the attack of pleurisy, but none of the medicines prescribed for me seemed to have any effect on the neuralgia which had by this time spread all over my body.

I gradually became worse; my appetite was lost, and the pain never seemed to leave me for an instant. My life was becoming a burden to me and I began to think I would never recover. I grew discouraged with the medicine I was taking, and happened to see a testimonial in the newspaper about Paine's Celery Compound, I concluded to get a bottle, although I had very little faith in patent medicines.

Before I had finished my first bottle I began to feel better, the pains and soreness greatly decreased, and gaining hope by my improved health, I finished the first bottle and bought a second.

After using two bottles of your Compound I feel like a new woman; my appetite has returned, the neuralgia has left me, and I am as well as ever. I feel very thankful for the benefit I have derived from your medicine, and the pleasure in recommending it to my friends. Should any one desire fuller particulars, if they will communicate with me I will be happy to oblige them."

SWEET-PEASE.

It used to be considered in the "good old days," when our grandmothers grew the sweet pea, that an early crop was the true, in a way, to-day. But not every one can grow it, and no one knows the impossibilities of this beautiful flower unless it is a grower.

The first thing to do in growing sweet-pease is to obtain good seed. You can get it if you buy of dealers who are established and reputable for fair dealing and honesty. They cannot afford to sell anything but good seed, if they had the disposition to do so. The best may cost you a trifle more, but will prove money well invested.

Unlike other flowers, the sweet-pease insists on being planted as early in the season as possible. As soon as the ground can be worked, begin to get ready for it. If you are going to sow in rows—and that is advisable, because it is easier to furnish water to your plants when grown in that way—dig a trench about six inches deep. Throw up the soil and let the sun have a chance to dry it, and then draw a little disintegrating influence upon it. It will be thrown up in lumps and eld, because at that season the moisture from melting snows and early spring rains will not have drained off; but dry it by two or three exposures to the warmth of the sun will so affect it that it may be easily crumbled and pulverized by the hoe.

Sow the seed thickly. It should not be more than an inch or two apart. Cover lightly at first. After the plants have got to be an inch or two high, draw a little more soil about them. Keep on putting more soil into the trench as the plants grow, until all the earth thrown out of it at plant time is returned to it. - Harper's Bazar.

GRAT BATTLES are continually going on in the human system. Hood's Sarsaparilla drives out disease and RESTORES HEALTH.

YOUR PHYSICAL CONDITION.

Needs attention at this time. If you are tired, weak and nervous, it is clear that your blood is impure, and without doubt there has been too much over-work or strain on the brain, or too high, draw a little more soil about them. Keep on putting more soil into the trench as the plants grow, until all the earth thrown out of it at plant time is returned to it. - Harper's Bazar.

Everlasting Blackness.

There is a fast and everlasting Black that all women desire to secure when home dying is done. The fast, imperishable and non-staining Black is only secured through the use of the fast Black Diamond Dyes.

These are three Fast Black Diamond Dyes—Fast Black for Wool, Fast Black for Silk and Feathers and Fast Black for Cotton, all sold at ten cents per package. The directions for use are simple that even a child can get better results than even the experienced dyer of a few years ago.

The peculiar way in which the Diamond Dye Fast Blacks are made gives them a vast superiority over all other methods of home dying.

When buying Black dyes see that you get the fast Black Diamond Dyes; remember there are poor imitations—dyes sold in many places.

THE MAMMOTH CHEESE.

OTTAWA, May 3.—The mammoth cheese exhibited at the world's fair, and afterwards shipped to England, figured in the auditor general's report. Mr. Robertson makes the following note with regard to it: "On account of the refusal of the firm in England to which the mammoth cheese was sold to receive it at the price agreed upon, there was almost no revenue in cash from it. With the approval of the minister of agriculture no action was taken to recover by legal process the amount for which the cheese was sold to Thomas Lipton & Co. I consider that the firm was entirely responsible for the original cost of the cheese, but in view of injury to the trade in dairy products from Canada which must result from a lawsuit by the depot must have been entered against a merchant whose trade interests were spread over forty or fifty large cities, I am of the opinion that the prudent course was to let the matter drop. The Robertson cheese had fully achieved all that was expected from it in advertising the dairy interests of Canada and the excellent and superior keeping quality of our cheese."

A SUCCESSFUL EXPERIMENT.

MR. T. HAZLEHURST, OF BRANTFORD, USES A SPECIFIC REMEDY WITH GREAT EFFECT. BRANTFORD, May 6.—Interest has been revived here, through the published despatches about the Kent case in Ottawa, in the extraordinary recovery from diabetes of Mr. T. Hazlehurst, an esteemed resident of the town. This gentleman suffered very severely from the complaint, losing a great deal of weight, and trying a number of remedies without success. At last when completely worn down, he determined to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and in an incredibly short time recovered his health and strength. He attributed his recovery entirely to the use of this valuable remedy, and has recommended it in several cases with marked success.

Cold in the head—Nasal Malm gives instant relief; specially cured. Never fails.

Keeping Himself Posted.

Why shouldn't a man read fashion notes if he wants to? He has a perfect right, certainly, and it is quite commendable in him to keep himself thus "posted," for it is a sort of satisfaction for a woman to be told by a man who she knows "knows" that her gown or bonnet is "just the thing."

He is a modest looking young man, working for a very moderate salary, but has a very charming little wife, and it was known among their friends that they meant to attend, just once, the grand opera. Riding out on a crowded car the other evening he unfolded his paper and began to read. There was a whole column of fashion items, illustrated, with suggestions as to how to get up an economical and pretty toilet for grand opera wear, and of course he was interested and began to follow it. A lady sitting next him innocently glanced at the paper, and, as a matter of fact, the first thing that he noticed upon it was the fashion column. The young man looked up at her from his paper and blushed as if ashamed to have been caught in the act, and immediately his eyes sought some telegraphic news, while the lady smiled knowingly and encouragingly; so he presently turned down the page of the paper and finished reading, word for word, all that was said about bodies and bonnets.

Landlady—Why didn't you ring the dinner bell, Minna? Servant Maud—I couldn't find it, ma'am. Landlady—I told you it was hanging in the hall. Servant Maud—Excuse me, ma'am, you told me only this morning that it was the breakfast bell.—Bunsen's Digest.

IRON DUKE CORN CULTIVATOR.

Instantly Narrowed or Widened
By turning the Crank.
Fitted with Reversible Steels and Extra Hillers.

Our Improved Iron Duke Corn Cultivator.

This Cultivator has proven a wonderful success. It has had a remarkable sale. We have placed it at an attachment for instantly narrowing or widening the wings by simply turning a crank. This is an improvement of a substantial nature, and will commend itself to purchasers. We have several styles of steel to choose from, but our No. 38, as shown in cut, appears to be the favorite. The Iron Duke is compact, light and strong, is a model of elegance, does the work of 10 men, and is in every way a superior tool. Buy no other. The mechanism for narrowing and widening instantly is ingenious and strong. The wings are held firmly in position. The longer you use this little tool the better you like it.

one. The noticeable features of the pro-is to be hoped that they will meet with the success of which they are deserving.

NAYLOR'S OPERA HOUSE.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, 13, 14, 15. Bayle's players in new drama and specialties, at reduced prices, 10 & 20 cents.
Don't fail to hear them. One of the cleverest companies who have ever appeared in town and worthy of patronage.

Band Concert.

The open air concert by the Citizen's Band drawed an immense crowd last Friday evening.
Prof. Denmark's musicians gave a fine programme which was greatly appreciated by all. The band is a credit to Deseronto.
The week would be dull and insipid without these open air concerts. The band deserves hearty support.

Sanitary.

Citizens should not forget the notice given by the board of health with reference to cleaning their wells and premises. This must be done by the 15th or earlier, as prosecutions will be sure to follow. Our local board must insist on this as the provincial board is imperative in its demands in this direction.

Commendable.

The merchants are taking steps to secure a proper observance of all public holidays during the coming season. All shops will close on the Queen's Birthday, Dominion Day, Labor Day, etc. In the past there has not been that unanimity of action in the matter which should characterize men of sense and public spirit. A meeting should be called and resolutions passed to secure united action.

Reconciliation.

Complaints have been lodged at this office concerning the conduct of four young men who went up to the west end of town last Friday evening for the purpose of picking a quarrel and performing other acts of rascality. They struck Thos. Green, an inoffensive person, cutting his face. These young fellows are well known offenders.
Out of mere respect to their parents they have been leniently dealt with, but it is thought that such leniency has been a great mistake judging by results.

Expressions of Sympathy.

In remitting the half yearly grant of $25 to the Mission School of the Reserve to the Rev. G. A. Anderson, M. A., W. M.
Vernoy, Esq., the clerk of the New England Company, in his letter of 25th April last says: "At the last meeting of the Company I was instructed to convey to you an assurance of the Company's most sincere sympathy with both you and Mrs. Anderson in the very sad bereavement which you have lately sustained, and their deepest regret at hearing of your own severe illness from which they trust you have now recovered."

The Weather.

The oldest inhabitant confesses that the weather of the past week is something that he never before experienced at this season of the year. The temperatures have been of a tropical consistency, the mercury ranging very frequently in the eighties.
Friday, 3rd, it was 77.5 in the shade, Saturday 76.2, Sunday 84.6, Monday 85.5, Tuesday 80.2, Wednesday 79, Thursday 84.2.
There were fine growing showers on Saturday and on Tuesday night. In fact the weather is more like June or July than the first week of May.

Flower Service.

The Methodist Sunday school has selected the 19th June as the date for holding their Flower Service. Committees will decorate the church and prepare a suitable and interesting programme. Rev. D. O. Crossley has promised to be present and give an address; he will also sing one or more of his popular selections. A collection will be taken which is hoped will amount to $20, the sum required to meet the annual payment on subscription to the church building fund. Parents of scholars and the public are cordially invited and requested to encourage the school by attending this service.
School will open at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

Death of Captain Dobble.

Thos. Dobble, one of the oldest and most esteemed citizens of Oswego, died on Saturday, aged 80 years. He was born in Glasgow and in 1821 came to America settling for a year in Canada. In 1835 he entered upon work in Sylvester Dobble's shipyard in Oswego. He was engaged in the tug and vessel business for a number of years and built several tugs and vessels. For many years, during the time that A. S. Page & Co., carried on a lumbering business at Rosmore and Baker's Island, he commanded the tug Oswego and several large barges, and also the Alanson Sumner, which regularly plied between Page's mills and Oswego, frequently carrying two millions feet of lumber in tow. In the old shipbuilding days at Deseronto much work was done to his fleet of vessels. He was a prominent and successful lake captain and by his death another old landmark is removed. He was an outspoken, upright man and many old friends in this district will hear of his death with great regret.WARNING

COLOSSAL FORTUNES.

SOME RICH MEN WHO LIVE IN THE OLD WORLD.

India and China Regions of vast and hidden wealth—The Duke of Cumberland Measures His Plate by the Ton—Some Rich German Noblemen.

The death of the Russian Czar, Alexander II., has been a great event to recall how very little is known even in England, of the existence in the Old World of millionaires beside whose wealth even that of the Goules, Rockefeller, the Vanderbilts and the Astors sinks into comparative insignificance. True, it is wealth that is not so extensively advertised in the public press as that of the great American millionaires, and hence is but little heard of outside of their own country.

But we doubt if there is an American or English millionaire whose riches are so boundless as, for instance, those of M. Baskerville. His fortune was simply incalculable, and his position in Siberia, which have been in his family for generations, and are famous for the richness of their ore, constitute only a portion of the estate that he has left to his brother, each of his four sisters receiving huge legacies, and nothing being left to his divorced wife, who was the cause of such a sensational law suit at St. Petersburg and Paris some fifteen years ago. Most of the large sturgeon fisheries in Russia belong to him, and his estates in Caraburg and Smolensk are of the size of kingdoms. Equally incalculable and incalculable is the wealth of the late Archduke Albert, who also stands in great part of mining property, this house enjoying almost the monopoly of malachite and lapis lazuli, besides possessing the richest silver mines in Russia of great richness.

Then, too, there are the Yousouffs, who control almost the entire output of turquoises in the world, and who derive nearly an incidental feature of the many resources of revenue of the Princess, who is now the sole heiress of the property. Her husband, the late Prince of Bulgaria, by the Czar to assume her name and title, is descended in the third generation from a Philadelphia named Elton, who entered the service of the Czar Paul at the close of the last century.

Little is known of the extent of the wealth of the late Archduke Albert, whose estates comprise a goodly portion of the entire Empire, and who owned something like 50 per cent. of all the big manufacturing and industrial establishments in the dominion of his nephew, Emperor Francis Joseph.

In this case, as in that of the Russian arch-millionaires, it is literally impossible to calculate the fortune of the Archduke with any degree of precision, since a portion consists of mine property. But equally incalculable is the fortune of the Czar of Russia, which has been variously estimated at from $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 and the income from which is about $30,000,000 per annum. But this is probably below the actual figure, and it must be borne in mind that these are the personal estates of Emperor Nicholas are huge tracts of territory as big as the State of New York, and bounding in mineral wealth which is far only the early stages of development.

Then, too, think of that Anglo-Hanoverian Prince who bears the title of Duke of Cumberland, and who is the de jure sovereign of the Duchy of Brunswick. His wealth is so great that he measures his family plate, his silver and gold dinner service, etc., not in hundred weight, as ordinary millionaires do, or by the ounce, as do people of small fortune, but by the ton, and on his last visit to England for the first time, he brought along with him just fourteen tons—long tons at that—of plate for temporary use.

There are some German noblemen, especially in Silesia, who are as rich as Prince Pless, Prince Puckler, and Count Henckell-Donnersmarck, whose revenues exceed those of the English Duke of Westminster, who has an annual income of some $5,000,000 a year, and whose one dread is that he and his family are doomed to die in a poor house.

During a few days that preceded the official deposition of Khedive Ismail and after he had received private intimations from Constantinople of the fate that was in store for him, long trains of ammunition wagons loaded with specie and precious stones made their way across the desert from Cairo to Suva by night under the escort of the British army, and the Khedive. It is estimated that he carried away with him $100,000,000 on that occasion—that in addition to the property which he had already carried off for safe-keeping in various European banks, and in addition also to the enormous landed estates, which the Egyptian Government recently purchased from him at a cost of $15,000,000.

This fortune represented the fruits of eighteen years of cruel taxation and wholesale confiscation. For in those days whenever a man became rich in Egypt he was sure to be found guilty of some imaginary offense that furnished a pretext for the seizure and absorption of his property by the Khedive.

Nor has any one probably any idea of the vast wealth that lies concealed in Asia, particularly in China and India, the reason for this being that Orientals have no confidence in banks, and prefer to conceal rather than to best of the possession of wealth. As a general rule, it is buried beneath the ground, and the only evidences thereof that are to be seen are the jewels which the owners occasionally wear and their estates.

One old Chinaman, Wan Po, who was Russian Consul at Singapore, was known to possess in large quantities an invisible property a fortune to the amount of $20,000,000.

"Do you think," he asked "that there is any truth in the saying, 'All the world loves a lover'?" "Yes, of course," he replied. "That's one of the things that are granted." "I'm glad to hear you say so. You know I have always told you that you are all the world to me."

Chollie—How Jove, do you know, I think I'll be coming to him in the end. Miss Figg—Why, Mr. Lylewater? Chollie—Just fancy, now, I love being in a grave for a year or so, and then to see you see, his clothes would be all out of fashion by that time?

Underhill—Doctor, how can sleeplessness be cured?

Doctor—Well, the patient should count slowly and in a meditative manner, 600, and then—

Underhill—That's all very nice, doctor, but the lady can't count—her nose's Weekly.

HENRI ROCHEFORT.

A Famous Writer Whose Cause He Got Him Into Trouble.

A cable correspondent estimates that 300,000 people were at the railroad station in Paris the other day to welcome Henri Rochefort on his return to the French capital after years of exile in England. Rochefort has been known to the French as a French journalist. Daring to the point of rashness when he handled a pen, Rochefort is timid if called to plead his own cause by word of mouth.

He has been in prison for a few months ago when the magistrate sentenced him to three months' imprisonment for "insulting the bench" in one of his blazing attacks on the magistrature.

But when he took up his pen and began to dissect the limb of the law who had shown his resentment by making "complete amnesty" difficult for him, the lightning of his irony he so "scattered" that judge that he made him ridiculous, and in France ridicule kills.

His exile was not a punishment to an end is not the first to which he has been subjected. For his share in the wild doings of the commune he was condemned to transportation to New Caledonia. The story of his escape from that penal settlement, and of his passing through the United States is well known. On his return to France, as he, of course, would not go to Europe, he settled down in London, and his political articles and pamphlets. In 1880 an amnesty bill was passed which restored all those imprisoned in the commune to France, and Henri Rochefort at once returned to Paris. He started the Intransigent, and the sentence was commuted to transportation to New Caledonia. HAS HE TWO GREAT AUKS?

Strange Birds Staying With a Farmer Give Him This Puzzling Impression.

According to a Tillamook County (Ore.) farmer, the species of sea bird known as the great auk is not extinct. He declares that two birds of this kind, presumably a male and a female, have been roosting in a very large spruce tree near his place for several months. By the aid of a field glass the settler, who is a naturalist of local renown, he claims, identified them beyond doubt as fine specimens of the great auk family.

From their actions the settler believes they will remain in his neighborhood and possibly raise a brood of young ones in the spring. He is encouraging them to stay, by giving them access to his wheat field, where they feed every day after the manner of geese.

It is highly improbable that the birds visiting the Tillamook farmer are great auks. A famous bird, before its generally credited extinction, was found only in the northeastern part of this continent, and in Northern Europe. The fact that they have built their nests in a spruce tree is also against the farmer's theory. The great auk's wings were so small as to be totally useless for flying, serving only as a means of support. On the other hand, as powerful swimming organs, it was because of the bird's inability to rise in the air that it was so common on the bare rock close to the water's edge.

The auk's swimming powers were so great that very few indeed have ever been captured alive.

In the autumn of 1881 Dr. Fleming, while on a cruise through the Hebrides, observed and described one that was taken alive in the sea off St. Kilda and put on board the yacht. With a spear attached to one of its legs, the specimen was occasionally allowed to disport itself in its native element, where it astonished everyone by the rapidity with which it swam under water. On the other hand, every time it broke loose and was soon beyond the reach of dispute. Another specimen had been observed a few years before off Papa Westray, one of the Hebrides, but in spite of the exertions of the crew of a six-oared boat, continued for several hours, the auk could not be overtaken.

This specimen, however, afterwards secured, and is now in the British Museum.

The great auk measured about three feet in length, had a large bill, and its feet were very small wings. The fact that the species is supposed to be now extinct gives great value to the remains now existing.

According to Prof. Newton, there are seventy-one or seventy-two skins, nine skeletons, thirty-eight or forty-one detached bones of different birds and sixty-five eggs.

Should the Tillamook farmer's birds prove to be great auks he will be well repaid for any trouble or expense in the way of the destruction of his wheat field. One of the sixty-five eggs now known to be in existence was sold recently in England for $1,500 in gold. At this rate one of the great auk's family would be even more valuable than the goose which laid the golden egg.

MRS. STOWE'S GREAT WORK.

Though Her Last Days Are Dark, She Has Achieved Much.

It may be that Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe will live for some time, though she is approaching her eighty-second birthday, but her mind is irretrievably gone. Mrs. Stowe's life has been most eventful, and seems to have been a series of triumphs and gloom and grandeur of the epoch in which the best of her work was done, the period immediately preceding the civil war.

She was born in 1812, and her father, Dr. Lyman Beecher, was a great abolitionist, which turned even her childhood thoughts toward the iniquities of slavery. Her progress at school was astonishingly rapid. At fourteen she was teaching a class in "Butler's Analogy" and could read Latin, Greek, French and Italian with ease.

Her practical acquaintance with southern life began after she had married William Lloyd Garrison, her first husband, most careful student of slavery, while living with him in Cincinnati. When she returned to New England a few years later she found that her husband's views were not in favor of abolition because they did not know what slavery really meant.

So she resolved to teach them, and wrote "Uncle Tom's Cabin." It did not mean much at first when it was first published in a newspaper in 1851, but soon its fame came to spread. In book form it made a still greater sensation. Half a million copies were sold of it in five years from its writing in America alone. Millions of copies have been sold since, and it has been translated into nearly every known language. She has written a score of other important books, but none has been so successful as "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Her husband, Dr. Garrison, who published the defense of Lady Byron, which at that time created a great sensation, and who has been falling since 1888, and her mind has deteriorated faster than her body.

GHOSTS ARE POPULAR

They Once More Appear Frequenting in Popular Current Literature.

Ghosts appear a curious popularity in England to day. Years ago they fell into unmerited disfavour, and for a century and a half they battled with scant success against that arrogant wave of reason and common sense which chilled the fair fields of poetry, swept romance from the land, and left the sombre glades of superstition tenantless and bare of every horror. From time to time the settlers, who are a naturalist of local renown, he claims, identified them beyond doubt as fine specimens of the great auk family.

The great auk measured about three feet in length, had a large bill, and its feet were very small wings. The fact that the species is supposed to be now extinct gives great value to the remains now existing.

According to Prof. Newton, there are seventy-one or seventy-two skins, nine skeletons, thirty-eight or forty-one detached bones of different birds and sixty-five eggs.

Should the Tillamook farmer's birds prove to be great auks he will be well repaid for any trouble or expense in the way of the destruction of his wheat field. One of the sixty-five eggs now known to be in existence was sold recently in England for $1,500 in gold. At this rate one of the great auk's family would be even more valuable than the goose which laid the golden egg.

MRS. STOWE'S GREAT WORK.

Though Her Last Days Are Dark, She Has Achieved Much.

It may be that Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe will live for some time, though she is approaching her eighty-second birthday, but her mind is irretrievably gone. Mrs. Stowe's life has been most eventful, and seems to have been a series of triumphs and gloom and grandeur of the epoch in which the best of her work was done, the period immediately preceding the civil war.

She was born in 1812, and her father, Dr. Lyman Beecher, was a great abolitionist, which turned even her childhood thoughts toward the iniquities of slavery. Her progress at school was astonishingly rapid. At fourteen she was teaching a class in "Butler's Analogy" and could read Latin, Greek, French and Italian with ease.

Her practical acquaintance with southern life began after she had married William Lloyd Garrison, her first husband, most careful student of slavery, while living with him in Cincinnati. When she returned to New England a few years later she found that her husband's views were not in favor of abolition because they did not know what slavery really meant.

So she resolved to teach them, and wrote "Uncle Tom's Cabin." It did not mean much at first when it was first published in a newspaper in 1851, but soon its fame came to spread. In book form it made a still greater sensation. Half a million copies were sold of it in five years from its writing in America alone. Millions of copies have been sold since, and it has been translated into nearly every known language. She has written a score of other important books, but none has been so successful as "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Her husband, Dr. Garrison, who published the defense of Lady Byron, which at that time created a great sensation, and who has been falling since 1888, and her mind has deteriorated faster than her body.

Jim Goddard's Promise.

CHAPTER I.

"Yes, they are both down with the fever, Jim—both father and sweetheart—and a pretty smart touch of it, too, I fancy. I met Miss Pert just now in the street. She could speak to me pretty fast enough when she wanted something."

Miss Belle Sutton, the buxom barnmaid who presided over the banquet at Kuranda camp, thought her befuddled head defiantly; "and she told me so and asked me if there was a doctor in the camp, and when I told her the nearest doctor was at Kuranda, four hours' ride off, she had the cheek to ask me to tell her of some one who would go to bring him. Fancy that, Jim, and on Christmas eve, of all nights in the year!"

"What did you say?"

"I laughed at her of course. 'I don't think the boys would stir out of camp for any one tonight,' I said, 'and certainly not for people like you, who treat everybody like the dust under their feet, and are so high and mighty and virtuous to associate with any of our poor sinners!' I had her there, eh, Jim?"

"Decidedly, my dear. If to love your neighbors is a Christian maxim, to hate your enemies is of an equally meritorious character, besides being indelibly more attractive to the carnal mind, and people who profess to be better than their neighbors are naturally enemies," Jim replied placidly. "And what did Miss—Miss Pert say to that?"

"Oh, she looked at me out of her great saucer eyes, and her lips twitched as if she were going to cry—great baby—then, 'Do you really mean that there is no one in all the camp with sufficient humanity to help two sick, perhaps dying men and a helpless girl?' she said."

"That's just as you like to put it, my lady," I says. "You've held yourself aloof from us all and looked down upon us, and now you'll find you can't drop and pick us up again and use us just when you think fit. You haven't a friend in the camp now, and you're a thing to that—just colored up and tossed her head and walked away. I guess she didn't like to hear the plain truths. By the way, Jim, I didn't think of you. You used to be a great friend of theirs at one time."

"Aye, I was when they first came to the camp," Jim replied in his lazy, reflective voice, "before they knew me intimately. When they thoroughly understood the high-toned, exalted nature of my character, they went back persistently to me and me from a distance. Give me another whisky, Belle."

Belle laughed as she refilled the empty glass. She glanced with admiring eyes at Jim Goddard, who sat against the doorpost, looking meditatively at the straggling row of wooden shanties and tents of which the camp consisted and on which the sunset light was shining. She laughed and went on with her chatter and her chatter and her chatter, and then, but not mechanically, she heard what she said. He was looking intently toward a clump of trees just outside the camp, under which, by the side of a wagon, a tent was pitched.

Within that tent, as Jim had learned of whom Belle had spoken last week by the terrible fever which a few weeks before had wrought fearful havoc in the little camp, they were lying there suffering, perhaps—for he knew the deadly nature of the fever—two men and a girl who was the daughter of one man and promised wife of the other. He was watching by them alone. Somehow, though Jim tried to harden his heart, he did not like to think of it; to picture the blue eyes which had once smiled so merrily and sweetly into his own, dimmed with tears, aching with long hours of anxious vigil; to imagine that sunny head bowed under the burden of anxiety. He tried to turn his thoughts to other subjects, but they went back persistently to the time when Mr. Clifton and his daughter Lois and her lover, Frank Wyvern, first came to the camp. He had made their acquaintance and had been of some slight service to them, the evening of their arrival, and they, attracted by the pleasant, courteous manner which Jim could assume at will, had made him welcome to their shanty. He recalled the pleasant evening he had spent there, the afternoon when he had returned earlier than usual from work, and as he passed the Cliftons' shanty had lingered under the trees where Lois generally passed the afternoon with her work or book, and spent a pleasant time with her alone. Those quiet tea-tables had been very sweet to him, deliciously sweet, considering that Lois was the promised wife of another man, and that even if she had been free she could never be anything to him—was well expect the millennium to come at once and the lion to lie down with the lamb as expect Lois—sweet, innocent Lois—to mate with one like him, Jim told himself sagaciously.

For a week or ten days the friendship, which was so pleasant to all, but especially so to Lois and Jim, had continued, and then one day Mr. Clifton had gone and his daughter and her lover, and he had decided that it must cease; that he who bore the reputation which Jim Goddard had earned for himself, even in a place where the standard of morality was not pitched unduly high, was no fit friend for her.

Lois was too much in awe of her father to rebel or to make any open remonstrance, and when she ventured to speak to her lover on the subject, she found that he held the same views as her father she reluctantly submitted to the stern decree which bade her regard Jim Goddard as a stranger. She deserted her seat under the trees, and the next time they met and he stopped to speak to her she had hurried on with a slight bend of her head and flushed cheeks and averted eyes.

Jim had looked after her and had first seen a deep cut to himself and then laughed harshly, but he was not the man to force his presence where he was unwelcome—he could take a hint as well as any one—so he came no more to the shanty, and on the few occasions when he met Lois he looked at her with a distant, courteous bow.

It was better so, he told himself. Sometimes in her presence he was tempted to think that he was wise in having made himself to forget that dark time of youthful folly, that moment of madness which had spoiled his life and brought his father's curse upon his head; but he forgot all this in the wild, reckless life to which it had been the prelude. Lois was no fit company for him. Like most nates with him, let him keep to his own kind. His place was in the bar, with the noisy revelers who crowded there after working hours were over to drink and gamble, not under the soft starlight by the side of that dove-eyed girl, with her sweet face and her low voice.

But though he had told this to himself and had determined to put her altogether out of his life and memory, to go back to his old life and friends, and to content with Miss Belle Sutton's society, his efforts had not been quite so successful as he could have wished, and now the unexpected news which Belle had given him had raised a tumult of mingled emotion in his mind.

"Well, aren't you going down to offer your services to Miss Pert, Jim? She'll be ready enough to welcome you now, in spite of the cold shoulder she's turned to you lately," she said.

Jim looked at her blandly and smiled. "I dare say she would," he said slowly. "I guess I'll give her the chance anyway."

Jim answered in his cool voice, and then he took up his hat and put it on turned to the door. "By the way, Belle, have you any drinkable 'fizz' left? I don't mean the fiery dejection you sell to the boys, but any of that cold brought back with me the last time I went to Martingrove."

"I believe there are two or three bottles," she said.

"Hand a couple over, then."

Jim tucked the champagne under his arm, and with a careless nod and a supreme disregard of Miss Belle's angry looks, which exasperated her afresh, went out of the bar and walked quickly down the street till he reached the Cliftons' shanty. The door stood open, and he came in with a relieved and contented air, and he was followed by the pale watcher who sat by her father's bed sponging his burning hands and brow with cool water and listening to his incoherent mutterings looked on for a moment in silence, then gently tapped at the door.

Lois started and turned suddenly round; then as she recognized the newcomer a hot crimson blush flamed into her pale cheeks, and into the blue eyes a gleam of hope and relief and confusion leaped up as she looked eagerly at him.

"Mr. Goddard! Oh, it is really you!" she said, and at the surprise and delight in her voice all the bitterness and hardness of her mood melted away.

He put the champagne carefully on the table and took the timidly offered hand.

"Since that is the reward you ask, take it," she said, with a cold disdain in her voice that stung Jim keenly, "but remember I give it for their sakes," and she glanced back into the shanty: "only for theirs! Take it, if you will, only as a reward for their sake."

Jim's color rose, and his eyes fell under that look. All at once he realized how base and unworthy the decision which he had asked; what a poor and contemptible creature he must seem to her. He dropped her hand suddenly.

"I never took a kiss yet from unwilling lips—I won't begin now," he muttered, and turned away with averted face.

Lois stood and looked after him with a strange expression in her blue eyes, with a gentle tumult of feeling agitating her frame. Heart. Anger was there, and pity, and a strange delight, and all were mingled with a vague self reproach and shame.

By and by she heard the sound of a horse's feet, and moved by a sudden impulse she went to the door just as Jim rode past. He did not pause, but took his hat and bowed low in his saddle.

"Keep up your courage. I promise you the doctor shall be here by daylight," he said, and Lois smiled and waved her hand, and then, feeling cheered and comforted by that parting assurance, she went back and resumed her lonely vigil.

Late though it was, lights were still burning in many of the houses, when, shortly before midnight, Jim Goddard rode into Curanda.

Jim dismounted at the door of the principal hotel, and giving his horse into the care of the Kafir groom ordered two fresh horses to be saddled at once and asked where the doctor's residence was. He received the gratifying intelligence that he was at that very moment in the hotel, where, so he was further informed, had taken place a wedding which had taken place that morning was being held.

The doctor came into the bar, where Jim was leaning against the counter drinking a glass of brandy and exchanging compliments with the pretty barnmaid, and looked sharply at him.

"Well, what is it?" he said impatiently. Jim took off his hat and bowed courteously and explained his errand, and then the doctor to accompany him at once to Kuranda.

"To Kuranda!" The little doctor looked more annoyed and dismayed. "Why, that's a good four hours' ride from here," he said.

"Look here, I'll give you some medicine now and ride over in the morning. An hour or two can't make much difference. I really can't go now."

Jim looked at him.

"Well, that's all right, but I really think that, on second thought, you will find it advisable to reconsider your determination. You are a stranger here, I believe, but it is possible you may have heard me mentioned. I am Jim Goddard, at your service."

"Jim Goddard!" The little doctor was naturally as little of a coward as most of his profession, but he had just received news of a friend in England, and had not altogether lost his inherited prejudices in favor of law and order, and since he came to Curanda he had heard too much of the wild, lawless ways of the diamond diggers, and especially of Jim Goddard, to regard with much complacency the prospect of a midnight ride along with him. But still less did he like the idea of refusing to accompany him.

"Very well," he said rather sullenly, "since it's an urgent case I'll go."

"I thought you would," Jim said sullenly. "I have already ordered a horse for you. By the time you are ready, and he placed at the doctor's dress suit and white tie and smiled grimly—how many years was it since Jim himself had worn such a suit?"—"it will be round."

The night was very hot and oppressive, unusually so indeed, for in Natal, however much the days may be, the nights are generally cool. The doctor remarked upon this and wondered what the cause of the unusual heat and the stifling, oppressive feeling that filled the air might be. If he had felt disposed, could have told him that the heat was probably caused by one of the grass fires common enough in that district during the hot weather, but he did not deem it prudent to do so. By and by, however, when they had ridden through a great "bush" and emerged from the trees on to the open veldt, the heat became still more oppressive, and the cause of it was soon apparent to the doctor, for far across the veldt there came rolling along a great cloud of smoke, lighted here and there by darting tongues of flame, and behind the smoke a lurid light, which was not the light of the coming sunrise, but the light of a great fire.

The doctor checked his horse with an exclamation of alarm.

"Look, look!" he cried, and pointed with his whip across the veldt.

"Yes, bit of a grass fire," he said composedly. "They are common enough in the dry seasons; Kaffirs, and white men, too, for that matter, are such careless fellows. They think nothing of flinging a lighted match or a straw among the grass, and then there's a flare-up, as you see. Come on, man; don't stand staring at it," he added impatiently.

But the doctor pulled his horse's head sharply round.

"No, I am going back," he said.

"Nonsense, man; there's no danger! We can reach the ford long before that overtake us, and the nearer we get to the river the less danger, for the ground is sandy and there's less for the flames to feed on. Come along."

"Not I! I am going back," the doctor said resolutely.

"No, you are not."

Jim put his hand on the doctor's shoulder and jerked the horse round again. His face had grown very set and grim. Under his dark brows his blue eyes looked at his companion full of a cold, relentless determination.

"I promised her that you should be here, and I shall not let her down. I have to ride through that hell for it," he said between his clenched teeth.

"I won't, I tell you. Take your hand away!" the doctor cried, and he struck at Jim's hand wildly with his riding whip.

"And I say you shall," and then in an instant Jim's hand had gone to his pocket, and the doctor felt the touch of cold steel against his forehead. "Take your choice, man," the inexorable voice said, "ride on or—" and the steel touched his brow again.

"I'll go. Take that away," the doctor said sullenly, and Jim smiled and slid the revolver into his pocket again.

"There's no real danger, man. Fortunately there's a creek just beyond the ford long before that overtake us," he said composedly. "Only don't fool away any more time here."

For some time they rode on quickly and in silence, the doctor cast anxious, furtive looks toward the cloud of smoke that came rolling across the veldt toward them, but Jim's composed face and perfect calmness slightly reassured him. Perhaps there was no danger, no real danger, and as Jim said, the smoke would reach the ford before the fire overtook them. Just as this comforting thought passed through his mind his horse swerved suddenly, caught its foot in a hole and fell, throwing the doctor to the ground. He was not hurt and was on his feet in an instant, but when, with Jim's assistance, he proceeded to raise the horse he found to his alarm and dismay that the poor beast's leg was broken.

He looked down at Jim, who was passing him, and saw that the injured limb, with a wild terror in his eyes.

live or die? I promised her," and he set his teeth fiercely. "That you should be at the camp by daylight. I'll keep that promise. I'll be there for it. So go on, then, and tell me where you left me. I shall make for the ford. I'll don't turn, tell them to look for me there. Mount, say, and then, as the doctor hastily swung himself in the saddle, he struck the horse sharply with his riding whip across the flank, and it reared and plunged and broke into a wild gallop.

Jim looked after him in the saddle, and waistcoat and went off at a steady, swinging pace across the veldt. He had only gone a few paces, however, before a sudden gust of wind struck him, and he turned and ran back to where the young horse lay struggling in pain and terror. "A moment more or less can't make any difference," he said to himself, and then he took out his revolver and shot the horse through the head.

The doctor heard the report and turned, struck by a new terror, expecting he scarcely knew what, and was relieved to see Jim's horse galloping steadily behind. He looked again and again as his horse flew onward—looked with ever increasing anxiety as the cloud of smoke came nearer and nearer, and the tall figure became first a speck and then lost in the distance, and far away he saw with a thankful heart the moonlight gleaming on the quiet river.

The dawn was breaking when the doctor rode into camp. He aroused the inmates of the first shanty he came to and told his story, and quickly and silently he rode on, and a dozen men galloped out of camp in search of their comrade. They found him where he had bade them look for him, on the river bank, lying unconscious and helpless, his head resting on the ground, which he had dragged under his arm, and one arm and leg, and when he awoke to consciousness again he awoke also to an agony of pain. He was conscious by and by in the midst of his torture of the entrance of a tall, white figure, who knelt on the ground by his side and put a cool hand on his forehead and held some cooling drink to his parched lips, and with an effort he forced back a groan and opened his eyes and smiled at her.

"You see, I kept my promise, Lois," he said.

"Yes, yes, but at what cost?"

"Never mind the cost. He was in time? Your father and Fred will recover?" he asked.

"Yes, I think so," Lois cried. "He says that with care and proper treatment they will recover. They are both asleep now," and then she glanced hurriedly round the shanty.

They were alone, for the doctor, feeling that his patient was not requiring any further nursing, had stepped outside and was leaning against the wooden wall smoking his pipe. With a sudden impulse Lois bent over the mattress. Her blue eyes, full of a strange, beautiful light, looked into the doctor's face, and in a long, solemn gaze. "What did each read there in the other's eyes? What was the outspoken question that leaped up fiercely and passionately in Jim's, the unspoken answer which Lois gave back in return?"

No word was spoken, but in that supreme moment of each life heart spoke to heart, and each understood without the aid of words the other's thoughts.

For one long moment they looked at each other, and then the blushes which had deepened as they gazed away, and a quiet, beautiful smile came into her face. She bent her head lower, lower still, till Jim felt her light breath on his cheek, a loosened tress of her hair touched his brow.

"Jim," she said in a low voice full of inexpressible tenderness and love, "you would not take the kiss you asked for yesterday because I was unwilling. See, I give it to you now, dear, willingly, with all my heart, and I don't want her kiss still lower, and their lips clung together in a long, silent kiss.

"Doctor, tell me the truth," Jim said late that evening when Lois, who had gone to and from one shanty to the other, had come to his shanty and let him in to the doctor's care, "will my arm and leg ever be any use to me again? Shall I be a cripple all my life? Come, man," as the doctor hesitated, "speak out. I am not a child, and I am a woman. I want to know the truth."

"It is impossible to tell at present," the doctor answered evasively, and Jim gave an odd smile.

"Ah, I understand," he said. He did not speak again for some time, and the doctor, fancying he was asleep and being worn out with his long ride and want of rest, lay down on the mattress in the opposite corner of the shanty. By and by, however, hearing Jim groan and tossing restlessly to and fro, he rose again and asked if the pain was worse.

"Aye, almost unendurable. Can't you give me something to put me out of this torture?" Jim said impatiently. "Have you not any morphine, or chloral, or anything that will give me a few hours' sleep? I shall go mad before morning if this goes on."

The doctor hesitated.

"I could give you a sleeping draft, but I am afraid to do it," he said. "Your nervous system had a severe shock, and you had been working so hard with it. It might be dangerous in its present state to give you anything of the kind."

"Well, mix me a draft, anyhow; I won't ask if I can sleep it," Jim said impatiently. "On a sleepless night like this, I shall sleep, did so and placed it on the box that stood by the bed and served as a table."

"Don't take it if you can possibly help it," the doctor said, and Jim protested. "I thought of many things as he lay awake through the long, slowly passing hours and longed for the day to break: thought of the past and the future, of his wild, reckless life, of the many things, of sins forgotten until now, and the black record of those wasted years rose up before him, full of a terrible reproach and condemnation. Then from the past his thoughts turned to the future, to the question he had asked the doctor, to the evasive answer he had received. Jim understood what lay behind the answer as well as the doctor himself. A cripple! Jim Goddard, who had gloried in his strength, who had never known a day's illness, who had seen years of life, a cripple! Lame and helpless, an object of pity to a few, of contemptuous scorn to others! A cripple for life! Better, oh, better, to have died out on the veldt and yet, if so, and if he had died there he would never have seen that look in Lois' eyes, never felt the pressure of her sweet lips on his own. Ah, that kiss, that supreme moment of bliss, was worth living for—nay, more, was worth dying for, he told himself. But what of the future? They had been friends, but they could never be more friends again.

They were alone, for the doctor, feeling that his patient was not requiring any further nursing, had stepped outside and was leaning against the wooden wall smoking his pipe. With a sudden impulse Lois bent over the mattress. Her blue eyes, full of a strange, beautiful light, looked into the doctor's face, and in a long, solemn gaze. "What did each read there in the other's eyes? What was the outspoken question that leaped up fiercely and passionately in Jim's, the unspoken answer which Lois gave back in return?"

No word was spoken, but in that supreme moment of each life heart spoke to heart, and each understood without the aid of words the other's thoughts.

For one long moment they looked at each other, and then the blushes which had deepened as they gazed away, and a quiet, beautiful smile came into her face. She bent her head lower, lower still, till Jim felt her light breath on his cheek, a loosened tress of her hair touched his brow.

"Jim," she said in a low voice full of inexpressible tenderness and love, "you would not take the kiss you asked for yesterday because I was unwilling. See, I give it to you now, dear, willingly, with all my heart, and I don't want her kiss still lower, and their lips clung together in a long, silent kiss.

"Doctor, tell me the truth," Jim said late that evening when Lois, who had gone to and from one shanty to the other, had come to his shanty and let him in to the doctor's care, "will my arm and leg ever be any use to me again? Shall I be a cripple all my life? Come, man," as the doctor hesitated, "speak out. I am not a child, and I am a woman. I want to know the truth."

"It is impossible to tell at present," the doctor answered evasively, and Jim gave an odd smile.

"Ah, I understand," he said. He did not speak again for some time, and the doctor, fancying he was asleep and being worn out with his long ride and want of rest, lay down on the mattress in the opposite corner of the shanty. By and by, however, hearing Jim groan and tossing restlessly to and fro, he rose again and asked if the pain was worse.

"Aye, almost unendurable. Can't you give me something to put me out of this torture?" Jim said impatiently. "Have you not any morphine, or chloral, or anything that will give me a few hours' sleep? I shall go mad before morning if this goes on."

The doctor hesitated.

"I could give you a sleeping draft, but I am afraid to do it," he said. "Your nervous system had a severe shock, and you had been working so hard with it. It might be dangerous in its present state to give you anything of the kind."

"Well, mix me a draft, anyhow; I won't ask if I can sleep it," Jim said impatiently. "On a sleepless night like this, I shall sleep, did so and placed it on the box that stood by the bed and served as a table."

"Don't take it if you can possibly help it," the doctor said, and Jim protested. "I thought of many things as he lay awake through the long, slowly passing hours and longed for the day to break: thought of the past and the future, of his wild, reckless life, of the many things, of sins forgotten until now, and the black record of those wasted years rose up before him, full of a terrible reproach and condemnation. Then from the past his thoughts turned to the future, to the question he had asked the doctor, to the evasive answer he had received. Jim understood what lay behind the answer as well as the doctor himself. A cripple! Jim Goddard, who had gloried in his strength, who had never known a day's illness, who had seen years of life, a cripple! Lame and helpless, an object of pity to a few, of contemptuous scorn to others! A cripple for life! Better, oh, better, to have died out on the veldt and yet, if so, and if he had died there he would never have seen that look in Lois' eyes, never felt the pressure of her sweet lips on his own. Ah, that kiss, that supreme moment of bliss, was worth living for—nay, more, was worth dying for, he told himself. But what of the future? They had been friends, but they could never be more friends again.

"TO SEE, I HAVE KEPT MY PROMISE, LOIS," HE SAID.

Ah, friendship between Lois and Jim was impossible now. They had each reached their goal, and life could never be quite the same to them again.

He was to be a cripple, a helpless cripple for the rest of his life. The thought was torture to him. He could have shrieked aloud in impotent rage and pain as he tossed restlessly on his mattress, and his wounds burned and throbbled afresh. Would the morning never come? Would that sleeping log in the opposite corner never wake? Then his eyes fell on the rude table by his side, and he saw the draft which the doctor had placed there before he slept.

PLEASANT ENTERTAINMENT.

The entertainment held last Friday evening under the auspices of the Steady Gleamers of the West End Mission was of a very pleasant character. The programme was well carried out in all its various features and the audience were very demonstrative in their applause.

The choir gave several choruses in a very acceptable manner and the costume and marching songs by the children were given with good taste and spirit. Nathan Smith excelled in his cobbler's song. A violin and organ duet by Mr. and Mrs. Green was very pleasing and Mr. Thompson was heartily applauded for a vocal solo.

Miss Jane Druce gave a recitation and her three-year-old son, with their violin and bones, completely stormed the house and were most vociferously applauded. They were wonderful performers on their instruments. A neat sum was realized.

A DREADFUL DISEASE CURED.

Messrs. Douglas Bros. & Co.: Gentlemen,—I have much pleasure in offering you testimonial on the cure of Barbara's Toth.

For over three weeks my face was nothing but a mass of sores, and it was still getting worse. It got so bad that I was ashamed to go out on the street. I went to a very prominent doctor of this town and he told me it would be a few months before I could get rid of it. On a Sunday a neighbor came to see me with about half an ounce of your Douglas' Egyptian Lintment and requested me to try it. I thought I would give it a trial; I put it on my face that same day, and in less than three days my face was as smooth as ever it was. I might also say that I only bathed my face once and that I consider I have a permanent cure. I cannot recommend your Lintment too highly for the value it has been to me. The doctor here is to be true and correct.

I remain yours,

G. A. MEYERSON, Painter.

Tamworth, 16th May, 1893.

TO BE TRIED BY JURY.

Dr. Yones, of Denbigh, who was sent up for trial to Pembroke last week on a charge of finding the lost value of Mr. James McCreary and appropriating to himself the sum of money which it contained, was brought before Judge Thomas Deacon on Thursday last. The case was heard at length and then Dr. Yones elected to be tried by a jury. The trial was fixed for the June sessions. Meanwhile Dr. Yones will be set at liberty if he can find two sureties of $500 each.

Norway Pine Syrup heals the throat.

An Old Lady of Over 50 Years.

HER RIGHT SIDE WAS BADLY PARALYZED.

Her Sufferings Were Such That She Wished to Die.

Paine's Celery Compound Saved Her Life and Renewed Her Strength.

THE BEST MEDICINE FOR THE OLD AND YOUNG.

It is now an established fact that our dear father and mother and our grandparents have had their lives prolonged, and their years made happy and joyous by the use of Paine's Celery Compound.

Many old people suffer from nerve troubles, rheumatism, kidney and liver complaint, sleeplessness and terrible paralysis. With such dangerous diseases clinging to them, they are liable to drop off at any moment.

If we are truly and honestly interested in the welfare of the old people, we will anxiously seek to use the agency that will best meet their troubles. In the past thousands of aged people have been rescued from death by Paine's Celery Compound, and are now enjoying a happy old age. Every week new testimonials are received from old people, as well as from their sons and daughters, lauding the strengthening and rejuvenating powers of earth's best medicine.

Mrs. James Cain, of Frost Settlement, N. S., now in her eighty-first year, has just sent in convincing and cheering testimony regarding the value of Paine's Celery Compound; she writes as follows:—

"I am happy to state that Paine's Celery Compound has been a great blessing to me. In November, 1893, the whole of my right side was paralyzed, and the doctor said I was too weak to take much medicine; I managed, however, to use a little, and was able to sit up for a short time but felt so bad, that I wished to die, as I thought death would be a great relief to me.

"In my weak condition I began using Paine's Celery Compound. The first bottle gave me relief. I continued to use the Compound, and I have gained health, strength, and flesh, and my friends say I look quite healthy. Although in my eighty-first year, my limbs are getting stronger, and I hope soon to be quite myself again.

I would advise all who are suffering from paralysis and other troubles to use Paine's Celery Compound and the Wills' English pills that accompany the compound, and if properly used, they will surely cure."

ALMOST CRAZY

Suffering from Constipation.

EXPECTED TO BE IN THE ASYLUM—AFTER ALL OTHER REMEDIES FAILED. B. B. MADE A PERFECT CURE, RESTORING ROBUST HEALTH.

GENTLEMEN.—To say all I ought to in favor of B. B. would be impossible. It has been a great health restorer to me and I do swear by it. I am a different man now to what I was ten years ago when I was expected to be in the asylum, but now I am in perfect health and it was the B. B. B. that did it. I suffered for five or six years from constipation, sometimes so severely that I went out of my mind. I tried various doctors, both in the country and in the city and took a lot of medicine to no avail, but everything failed to have the desired effect. When I used Burdock Blood Bitters, however, it succeeded beyond all expectations, requiring only two bottles to cure me. To make it still more certain that some two years after I felt the symptoms returning and took one bottle more, and from that time to this present day (over eight years) I have never had any return of the disease. I never knew any medicine to work so well. It does not seem to be a mere reliever but a sure and certain cure, as I can certify to, for hundreds of dollars' worth of medicine and advice failed to do me any good, but three dollars' worth of B. B. made a permanent cure that has given me years of health and comfort.

Yours truly,

C. L. KILMER.

BLOSSOM-TIME.

Oh! the sweet world of the blossoms, When the blithe winds to and fro Rock the softly linked cradles.

Where the fruited orchards grow, All the breezes wafting perfume, O'er wide fields of drifting snow.

Sage of summer and of flowers, Not the flit of the feebly chill, Once that filled the dooryard, I felt Rounded out each watching bill.

Sow of summer and of flowers, Acres of it, where you will. Hidden deep among the peals, Even from eyes that love my best, Many a patient little mother, Brings beneath her beating breast Wings and songs that walk their rapture When they flutter from the nest.

Oh! the white world of the blossoms, Where the sweet winds to and fro Softly, softly, rock the cradles, Swinging high, and swinging low, Cradles of the fruited orchard, In the blossoms' tinted snow.

TO MAKE PURE BLOOD.

There is no medicine better for the people equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is the standard spring medicine and blood purifier and it possesses peculiar merit which others try in vain to reach. It really makes the weak strong. Do not neglect to purify your blood this spring. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hood's Pills become the favorite cathartic with every one who tries them. 25c. per box.

A CAUTION! A WARNING.

If, on blowing the nose in the morning, lumpiness or redness is observed in the blood, especially on one side, lose no time in applying a remedy. Catarrh of the worst kind may become seated, and the average case is full of small ulcers, and if not soon cured will be hard to cure and eradicate. "A stitch in time saves nine." Use Chase's Catarrh Cure.

HAD FOR FRANCE.

Recent investigations show that in France the actual consumption of alcohol to each inhabitant has more than trebled in the last forty years. A man of Rouen, where exact information was obtained, the average daily consumption of alcohol by each inhabitant is one-half litre, or eighty-eight one-hundredths of a pint to each person. By this is not meant either wine or malt liquor, but pure alcohol. Throughout France, there are 55,000 wine shops, and in the year of 1870; but there has been little or no increase in the population. There are 32,000 liquor shops in Paris, and 325,000 in the departments. One to every eighty-eight inhabitants. In the country departments, the number of minors under sixteen years of age brought up before the courts for intoxication is frightful.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Prince of Wales has accepted the Chairmanship of the newly formed Welsh University.

It is expected regular trains will be running on the T. H. & B. between Hamilton and Waterloo by May 24th.

Nominations for the vacant representation of North Brant in the Ontario Legislative Assembly will take place on May 20th and 21st.

The Freight Rates Commission has reported to Parliament that the proposed tariff for the mining steamer Glad Tidings, which is reported missing off the Pacific coast, with several Ontario missionaries on board, was sunk in a collision with the Joseph L. Hurd near Skagway, Alaska.

The bow of the Hurd was knocked off, and George Johnson, the steward, was knocked overboard and drowned.

Sir Wm. Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, refused in the British House of Commons to fix a day to proceed with the motion to appoint a Scotch Commission to deal with the Scotch tariff bill.

MacFarlane said:—"If the matter is further delayed the Scotch Liberal members will have to reconsider their position towards the Government."

He answered that it was entirely open to members to reconsider their position.

GERANIUMS DISLIKED BY FLIES.

Now that the fly season is approaching, the following may prove of advantage to many. The suggestion comes from abroad that the fragrant geranium—the old fashioned rose geranium beloved by our grandmothers—keeps flies away. A moderate sized geranium of this variety is said to be so disagreeable to flies that they will avoid its neighborhood.

Two or three of these plants in a room will drive them out altogether.

"HOW MANY TOES HAS A CAT?"

This was one of the questions asked of a certain class during examination week; and simple as the question appears to be, none could answer it. In this emergency, the principle was applied to for a solution; and he also with a good natured smile, gave it up; when one of the teachers, determined not to be beaten by so simple a question, hit on the idea of sending out a delegation of boys to scour the neighborhood for cats. When this idea was announced the whole class wanted to join in the hunt. Several boys went out and soon returned successful. A returning board was at once appointed and the toes counted, when to the relief of all it was learned that a cat possesses eighteen toes, ten on the front feet and eight on the hind feet.

Sufferers from physical and nervous debility find great relief in the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Far better than any stimulant, its effect is not transient and superficial, but deep and permanent. It builds up the system by purifying and enriching the blood.

In a Buffet Car.

The famished man fell into the arms of the relief committee, gasping for food. To the miserable man they brought soup, he roared and other things, and for a steady hours he devoured all they brought.

Doctors clustered round him and finally announced that he would live. Then they gave him brandy and bade him tell his awful tale.

"I was—there—five—days," he whispered, "in the gutter. If I had not been rescued I should have starved to death."

He sank back, exhausted at the effort, with his head buried in his hands, and his arms outstretched to the larger mill and him. All the members of the committee clustered round him and pleaded with him to tell the story of his sufferings. He replied sufficiently to marmur:

"In a buffet car." All, everyone there present who had travelled in a buffet car and tried to get something to eat shuddered and covered their heads with their faces. Even strong men turned away their feet and cried.

"I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof."

FREE TRADE FOR NEW SOUTH WALES.

Sydney, N. S. W., May 10.—Premier Field made a statement in the assembly regarding the estimates for the coming year. The Budget, he said, proposed a great change in the country's policy. The Government was pledged to abolish the customs duties imposed in 1891 to establish a tariff on a free trade basis, and to reform the civil service. The Government was determined to stick to its estimate on direct taxation. There would be a land tax of a penny a pound, and an income tax of sixpence on the pound with the exception of the coming year. There would be a permanent tariff only on wine, spirits, tobacco and opium. The old duties would be retained for a year, the sugar duties alone remaining unaltered for two years. Political patronage in the civil service would be abolished. The estimated surplus was £56,184.

A POSSIBLE CANDIDATE.

A PATRON NOMINATION MAY POSSIBLY BE OFFERED TO MR. COLEY, OF SOMERSET, MAN.

Somerset was elected in May 12.—The item which appeared in several Eastern papers to the effect that Mr. Arthur Coley, a well-known farmer of this place, was asked to accept of a nomination for the coming elections, but was forced to decline through ill health, is without foundation. It is true that early in 1894 Mr. Coley was severely afflicted with Irish fever, but he was enabled to restore himself to health by a course of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and is equal to any amount of hard work, even to the extent of fighting the constituency should the nomination be offered him. He speaks in the highest terms of the remedy which cured him.

NIPISING.

For a year or two past the keenest rivalry has existed between North Bay and Mattawa for the distinction as well as the numerous great advantages, of becoming the county seat of the District of Nipissing. Whenever the election should be held it has been understood that it would be a battle-royal. On the 14th of March last, the issue was decided. North Bay coming ahead by a majority of 167 votes. It has been charged, however, that the greatest corruption prevailed, and an investigation promptly ordered by the Provincial Government, is now in progress. The evidence already taken goes to show that the municipal authorities of North Bay honored all druggists upon them out of the public treasury, and when they found that an investigation was inevitable, destroyed the vouchers. It is generally believed that the election should be voided by the Government, and a new one held, in which, doubtless, the questionable practices now exposed will be either eschewed or more carefully concealed.

WHY CONTEMPLATE SUICIDE?

It is like tempting Providence for consumptives to ignore the remarkable remedy known as Miller's Emulsion of Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. For any person to die of consumption without trying the remarkable fish and blood maker, after knowing of its existence, is suicide pure and simple. All that the consumptive patient needs is new blood with which to battle against the destructive forces of the disease. Miller's Emulsion provides new blood in abundance. It is a combination of Norwegian Oil, hypophosphites of lime and soda—a triumph of science. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scurvy and all Lung affections. In Big Bottles, 50c. and $1. at all Drug Stores.

LUMBERING IN CANADA.

In the course of his lecture before the Natural History Society of Montreal, Hon. J. K. Ward gives some interesting details of the lumber industry in Canada. The figures as to area and quantities are approximately as follows:—The area is estimated to be 1,000,000,000 acres, and it is extremely difficult to estimate the quantity of good timber on such a vast territory as Canada.

There are about 6,000 sawmills in the Dominion, employing during the season, of say 150 days, not less than 15,000 men in and around the mills, sawing, planing, shipping, etc. In the woods during the winter, getting out the logs, and timber, and river loggers, are about the same number.

Six thousand mills, averaging 400,000 per season, makes up the same apparent output of all the mills. This quantity is saved in a single day by the larger mills, and while many of the smaller mills do not turn out 200,000 in the season, the difference comes from the larger mills. The difference is 2,000 million—and that returned as cut on public lands is made up as taken off private lands and the Crown Lands of Nova Scotia, of which we have no returns.

and strong. The wings are held firmly in position. The longer you use this little tool

Chicago is diverting the water of Lake should make their purchases on Thursday.

In accordance with the town council the shops can remain open on Thursday evening previous, thus giving every opportunity to housewives to get in their stock of provisions for the holiday.

Dart & Oke.
Messrs. Dart & Oke have removed to their commodious new premises on Edmund street. The wareroom now presents a very attractive appearance and their patrons have a better opportunity of studying the different colors and new designs in furniture.
They ask attention to this change of advertisement in this week's TRIBUNE.

Casualties.
John D. Monaghan had the forefinger of his right hand badly crushed yesterday morning by a revolving saw in the Big Mill. Dr. Vandervoort dressed the wound.
On Sunday by the breaking of an axle, Mrs.
Solomon Loft was thrown from a buggy and seriously injured while her head was cut. Dr. Newton was summoned and attended to her injuries.

Railway Excursions.
The Bay of Quinte Railway will issue tickets at single fare to all points, on May 23rd and 24th, good to return up to May 25th. In connection with the great demonstration to be held at Kingston on May 24th and 25th special reduced rates will be given from all points on the line to that city, the return fare from Deseronto being $1.35.
On 24 and 25, there will be a special time table, the train leaving Deseronto at 7:50 a. m., returning leave Kingston at 5:30 p. m.
On other days trains will run on regular time.

Excursion to Guilph.
The members of the Farmers' Institutes of Deseronto, Edley and West and North Hastings, believing the Agricultural College and Experimental Farm at Guilph to be objects of interest to all of their occupation, have arranged an excursion to that place by special train from Pictou and Belleville, on the 18th of June. The fare for three-day return tickets is very low, being only $1.90 from Belleville, $1.75 from Trenton Jc., and $2.25 from Pictou. Full particulars will be given later.

Steamer Merritt.
The steamer Merritt which proved so popular with the travelling public last season, has undergone very extensive repairs and changes during the past winter, and her accommodations are now all that is necessary.
She has been completely refitted. There is now a fine ladies' cabin and ample state rooms. Meals will also be served on board in an elegant dining room. Important changes have been made in her machinery so as to increase her speed very materially.
With popular officers and a courteous crew the travelling public will be assured every consideration. She can be chartered for excursions to any point on the Bay of Quinte and River St. Lawrence. Applications for charters can be sent to Thos. Stewart's office, Belleville, who will act as general manager at that city, or can be forwarded to Messrs. Carr & Powers, Pictou. She will leave the Rathbun Captain's docks at Pictou and Deseronto, and Thos. Stewart's dock, Belleville.

Obituary.
Edward J. Culhane, of this town, died at the residence of his uncle, John McAllim, Marysville, on Friday, May 16th, 1895.
Deceased was a victim of consumption.
He had been in the Hotel Dieu Hospital all winter and about a week ago was brought to his uncle's residence. The winter before last he spent in California in order to check, if possible, the disease, but to no purpose.
Deceased was a saddler by trade and during the past few years had a shop in Deseronto.
He was of a genial, unassuming disposition and very popular with his young companions. His death, at the early age of 28 years, is lamented by a large circle of friends. He was a brother of Thos. P.
Culhane, of the Big Store office. The funeral takes place at 10 a. m., to-day from Marysville to St. Patrick's church, Napanee.
The remains will be interred in the Napanee cemetery.

The weather of last week continued on Friday and Saturday, the temperature on the former day reaching 86.4, the hottest day of the season, and on Saturday 81.1.
On Saturday afternoon there were some showers and a polar wave followed which has continued until the present time. The maximum temperatures have been: Sunday
58, Monday 55, Tuesday 49.2, Wednesday
56.7, Thursday 60.8. A few flakes of snow were observed on Monday morning. There was a light rain on Tuesday night. The cloudy and windy weather on Sunday and Monday prevented frost from doing as much damage here as in other parts of the province. There was a sharp frost however on Tuesday morning which nipped tender vegetation, ice even forming in some places.

Shannonville Race.
The Shannonville race on the 24th will attract a great many visitors. The directors

People are well through with their farm work and a big crowd will swell the gate receipts.

urday attending the meeting of the executive of the South Hastings Teachers' Association.
It was resolved to forego the usual convention this spring, a number of township next convention of the association will be held in Deseronto.

which will be fully explained. Parents of scholars, and the public are cordially

BRICKWORK BUILT TO STAY.

Remarkable strength of a Structure Recently Demolished in Liverpool.

In demolishing a part of the Albert Warehouse in Liverpool, belonging to the Mersey docks and harbor board, it occurred to the assistant engineer in charge of the work to make some investigations into the strength of the old brickwork.

The wall was built about fifty years ago of hand-made bricks, laid in ground mortar made with Flintshire lime. This lime is in a high degree hydraulic and has a reputation of making mortar of exceptionally good quality. The Journal of the Royal Institute of British Architects, which describes the investigation, states that the engineer conceived the happy thought of leaving a place of 11 in the twelve-foot span and measuring about two feet square in section, seven courses in the height of a two-foot wall. The ends of the beams were not cut free from the rest of the work. This beam was then loaded with all the weight that could be conveniently piled upon it, with no appreciable deflection or other sign of weakness resulting. Two courses were then cut out and the whole again put on, but without result. The beam was further reduced by a course, leaving four courses or fourteen inches deep, and the ends were also cut free from the other work—the mortar beds of the twelve-inch bearings being left untouched.

Centrally placed load of five tons fifteen hundred weight was then gradually piled upon it, and was borne for several days without apparent effect upon the brickwork. Finally the weight was increased to six tons nine hundred weight—twenty-three pounds, which was sustained for thirty hours, when the beam collapsed during the night and came down in pieces more like broken timber than anything else. Other tests were made with similarly astonishing results, but the above are sufficient to show what really first rate brickwork in hydraulic lime will stand.

JAPAN'S HIGH AMBITION. She Hopes to Be the Center of a New and High Civilization.

In "The Far East," a book by Mr. Henry Norton, appears the following speech, made by Count Okuma, ex-minister of foreign affairs, in the Japanese diet just after the present war began. It is probably a good summing up of Japanese hopes and feelings:

"The European powers are already showing symptoms of decay, and the next century will see their constitutions shattered and their empires in ruins. Even if this should not quite happen, their resources will have become exhausted in unsuccessful attempts at colonization. Therefore, who is fit to be their proper successors if not ourselves? What nation except Germany, France, Russia, Austria and Italy can put two hundred thousand men into the field inside of a month? As to their finance, there is no country where the disposal of surplus revenues gives rise to so much political dissension."

"As to intellectual power, the Japanese mind is in every way equal to the European mind. More than this, have not the Japanese opened a new era in the perfection of a discovery for which foreigners have not succeeded even after years of labor? Our people astonish even the French, who are the most skillful among artisans, by the cleverness of their work. It is true the Japanese are small of stature, but the superiority of the body depends more on its constitution than on its size. If treaty revision were completed, and Japan completely victorious over China, we should become one of the chief powers of the world and a great power could engage in any movement without first consulting us. Japan could then enter into competition with Europe as the representative of the oriental races."

HE WANTED TO LICK ENGLAND. Amusing Interview With An Irishman Which Secretary Gresham Enjoyed.

Secretary Gresham usually walks from his hotel to the state department. The other morning, says the Washington Post, while on his way through Lafayette park he was stopped by a tall, white-haired old Irishman, who doffed his hat, and, holding it in his hand, thus accosted him:

"Is this Judge Gresham?"

"Put on your hat, my man, or you'll catch the grip," the secretary replied. "I am the judge."

"Well, judge," the little old man replied, "it's just this way I have been reading in the papers that we stood a good chance to have a war with England. I have been waiting for such a chance to get in a few links for the old country ever since I left St. Patrick's blessed land. Sure, and I hope you are not going to take it away from me."

"And so you want to go to war?" the secretary asked.

"Indeed I do, if England's the spalpeen to be licked, though I know I would be killed. But when I came back, judge, sure I would vote for you for president."

"Well," said Secretary Gresham, restraining a smile, "send your address to the state department, and if we have war I'll satisfy you in time to get ready."

SOME USE FOR SPARROWS. There is a use for English sparrows which the average American citizen of sporting propensities has not so far discovered. It remains for the Chinese in the United States to direct attention to a novel purpose to which these birds may be devoted somewhat in compensation for their otherwise useless existence.

That John Chinaman, somewhere from some source inheriting considerable fighting blood, though he may not cut much of a shiao himself in a street brawl with us, is a man who is a pretty good fighter, it is known. That he has a wholesome respect for American justice is also a similar fact. Cock-fighting is prohibited, and he is likely to be a good fighter.

In order to have just as much fun as he would at a cock or a dog-fight, John has made experiments with sparrows, and the result is said completely to fill the measure of his happiness. The fighting sparrows are trained on the same principles as game cocks, and are fitted to fight as keen as the point of a needle. They can soon be trained to make as good fighters as two Spanish roosters, and those who have witnessed an exhibition of this sort declare that, next to a rat-killing, no Chinaman will admit that anything can surpass in interest a cocking match between two educated sparrows.—Washington Post.

A Lawyer's Charity. There is a place in Chicago who makes it a point to find a deserving man once a week and invite him to dinner. It makes no difference how shabby the man and may be a long time before the lawyer he is deserving.

BICYCLE FREAKS.

ALL DESIGNED TO CARRY THE RIDER FASTER AND EASIER.

A Frenchman Who Rides a Bicycle Pulled by a Dog—A Wheel that Carries Eight Men—A Railway Bike that Rides Three Miles in Two Minutes.

The bicycle had seized the Canadian people with a firm, hard grip. This is good news to the bicycle manufacturers and the inventors. The manufacturers are taking their producing capacity to the utmost and the inventors are finding all the time on improvements, each of which is designed to help the rider to travel faster and easier.

Many of these new-fangled machines are decidedly novel in construction. Some of them justly may be called freaks. Some day some ingenious fellow is going to hit the right combination, and then, perhaps, man will be as near to the flying machine as the inventor of the bicycle. The craze is universal, and not merely for pleasure, but for business as well. Letter-carriers, messengers, boys, mechanics going to and from their work, clerks, park policemen, and in Paris bakery boys and other persons calling from house to house, use bicycles in their daily occupations.

Most unimportant of all the old experiments on wheels is that of a Frenchman who rides along the Paris streets on a bicycle pulled by a dog. The dog is large and vain, but under the much given by a long whip, manages, as its master says, to pull him along at a much swifter rate than he could accomplish with the pedals. Perhaps the man is old and decrepit. At any rate, it is an odd contrivance.

There are two motor bicycles capable of developing considerable speed. One is an American invention, the other German. They are driven by gasoline engines. The German machine has its heavy driving motor set in the middle distance between the wheels. The American machine is less cumbersome. It looks like an ordinary safety with a piston and cylinder attached to the back wheel. It is said these machines can develop a speed of fifty miles an hour.

The other bicycle is another machine of the same class, except that it is used instead of water. By a condensing system the ether is used over and over again, and with one equipment the machine is good for one hundred miles. It can develop a speed of fifty miles an hour.

There are a number of bicycles designed to increase the ordinary speed by utilizing the hands for power as well as the feet. The various styles generally resemble a French machine, in which the handle bars are attached to levers running down to the pedal mechanism. Bicycling under these circumstances must be fatiguing.

Another French machine has a gear wheel and cranks attached to the handle bars. The gear wheel, on which the chain is fast, is connected by a perpendicular bar to the handle bar. By alternately pressing and releasing these bars with the hands and feet, the crank attached to back wheel is turned.

The bicycle sled will hardly be appreciated at this time of the year, except in those countries where the snow and ice around the year round. The arrangement consists of a skate or runner, which is substituted in place of the ordinary front wheel. The rider can then slide along at a startling pace.

Military bicycles are a somewhat old story. The newest thing in this line is one which can be doubled or tripled. It is between the two wheels is a hinge arrangement, and on this axis the pedals are doubled together. Facility in transportation is the object aimed at. The ordinary military bicycle is a squatty and apparently ungainly affair. Its feature is of little account in the general ensemble of the machine, in which use, and not beauty, is the consideration.

The art of pacing a cyclist who is trying to make speed has been reduced to a science. It is found that when a bicycle and its rider pass swiftly along a track they create a vacuum immediately behind the machine. Of course the vacuum is being constantly filled with air, which, rushing into empty space develops an enormous suction power. The larger the body which displaces the air the greater the suction power.

Taking advantage of this principle of physics, bicycles have been built for three, four and five men. The most rides directly behind this "pacing" machine, and is drawn along almost in spite of himself. The largest pacing machine on record has recently been made in Coventry, England. Eight men ride on it, tandem fashion. It is said to develop considerable speed as a pacer.

Perhaps the most curious machine of all is used in Paris. It is a monocycle, or machine having one wheel. It looks like an immense cart wheel, but it is capable of covering a great distance in a short time. This is a pure freak, as is also the Eiffel Tower bicycle exhibited in England a short time ago and imitated in this country.

It is said that this machine has been put to good practical use for the purpose of lighting street lamps.

Electricity does not seem to have been much tried as a motive power for bicycles. One man invented a machine which was propelled by a motor and storage battery carried beneath the seat. It was said that it cost five cents an hour to run, but as the number of batteries which a bicycle could carry would be extremely limited, it is not likely the machine was much of a success.

A Michigan man has invented a railway bicycle which has wheels with concave tires, so as to enable the machine to run on a single rail. Something of the same nature was used years ago by a performer on the stage, who rode his wheel along a tight rope. The Michigan machine is said to be able to accomplish three miles in two minutes.

Near San Bernardino, Cal., a bicycle was used to utilize the wind for propelling power has been in operation.

The "propelling skate," which is merely a wheel, as a last year's English invention, was used to propel a boat.

To Save the Bees. A few wide-necked bottles half filled with a mixture of sugar and beer, and hung among the fruit trees when in bloom, will snare many bees.

RISE OF THE WOMAN M. D.

It is Estimated that 15,000 of The Practicing in the U. S. and Canada
In the United States and Canada are for seven medical colleges for both sexes, and nine for women. The average number of graduates from all of the colleges is about 1,000, and as most of the colleges have established periods of from ten to forty years, it is estimated that there are nearly fifteen thousand physicians practising in the United States and Canada.

Belgium, England, Finland, Iceland, Italy, Norway, Switzerland have universities where women may study, and they allow these women to practise also, differing in that from Denmark, Holland, Ireland, Prussia, Scotland, and Sweden, where women may study, but may not practise.

In Germany, with magnificent educational advantages for men, it is impossible for women to obtain a medical education.

Taking Things for Granted

There are few things in the world which wound us so deeply as those that we are ignored by our fellow men that we are passed by or looked down upon as much as we may, even deny it, our own voice. We all have pretensions, and yet it is astonishing how few people recognize an attention it is shown them. For the most part, take altogether too many things for granted, and if it were only right to should come to us. Often some superiority, either mentally or makes us feel that certain attitudes due us and that they are ours. More often, however, the other, the of thoughtlessness.

A Great Educator.

The home is baby's school, and the scientific parent a child is the great self-educator, for he feels that self must be whatever he would be to be. A child of tenderness is both imitator and critic.

If you are courteous to his mother, he will be polite to women at home and abroad. You may think he is too young to take notice of the dispute you are having with your wife, but it is not so. A DREADFUL DISEASE CURED.
Messrs. Douglas Bro. & Co.: Gentlemen—I have much pleasure in offering you testimonial on the cure of Barbara's Itch. For over three weeks my face was nothing but a mass of sores, and it was still getting worse. It got so bad that I was ashamed to go out on the street. I went to a very prominent doctor of this town and he told me it would be a few weeks before I could get rid of it. On a Sunday a neighbor came in to see me with about half an ounce of your Douglas' Egyptian Lintment and requested me to try it. I thought I would give it a trial; I put it on my face that same day, and inside of three days my face was as smooth as ever it used to be. I might also say that I only bathed my face since and that I consider I have a permanent cure. I cannot recommend your Lintment too highly for the value it has been to me. This I declare to be true and correct. I remain yours,

ST. MARK'S CHURCH NOTES.

The subject of the sermon last Sunday morning was "The Marks of Jesus", Gal. IV, 17. In the evening, "The Omnipresence of God" was treated of, Text, Psalm 139, 7-12.
Next Sunday (the 5th after Easter) is also called Rogation Sunday because it is followed by the Rogation Days (the three days before Ascension day) when intercessions were made for the Divine blessing on the fruits of the earth. The Rogation days were originally appointed about 400 by Marcellus, Bishop of Vienna, who on occasion of certain calamities that overcame the Diocese, instituted special Litany to be annually used on these days. Thanks are due to Master Allan Kestor for a supply of beautiful wild flowers for the Church and also to other thoughtful friends for contributions of garden flowers for the same purpose.
The Women's Auxiliary assisted by the junior choir, have lately despatched a large bale containing many useful articles of clothing, etc., to a mission center in Manitoba. The Ascension-day appeal for 1895 has been received. It is an interesting appeal and is appointed to be read next Sunday while the offerings of the people on the following Sunday, 20th inst., are asked for the work of Domestic Missions in Algona and the N. W.
Next Thursday, the 23rd inst., is known as Holy Thursday or Ascension Day. A festival of the Church which unfortunately in modern days of worldliness does not receive that consideration which the framers of the Prayer Book (following Primitive Antiquity) obviously considered that it was justly entitled to.
A meeting of the officers and committee of the Church Women's Aid Society was held on Monday last.

ANIMALS TRIED FOR CRIMES.

In Olden Times the Lower Animals Were Punished Just Like Men.
In these days of enlightened equity it is hard to realize that there was a time when the lower animals were prosecuted by law. As late as the sixteenth century hogs, rats, flies, bees and insects of various kinds were solemnly tried for depredations of which it was said they were guilty. It is recorded that a lot of rats tried to eat up the barley of the south of France. In the trial the rats were defended by Chasseneux, a great lawyer of the day, who actually won the case for the animals. In Savoy the case was the only animal exempt from capital punishment. Why it should have been exempt more than other animals is a mystery. Sometimes an animal would be executed. Again it would be anthropomorphized.
Mules have had their ears lopped off for wrongdoing. If the mule was very bad he ran the chance of being declared forfeit to the king, wherefrom it can be suspected that there was just a trifle of method in the governmental madness. It is stated that a horse of small size which had become a pest in Mayence escaped punishment because of its extreme youth and small size. Once in France a number of hares were tried for devouring an infant. The verdict was that they should be hanged, drawn and quartered. The sentence was carried out.
Procedures of the nature were common as late as the time of Shakespeare. Towards the latter end of the sixteenth century the authorities awake to a sense of the utter silliness of the whole affair and by the year 1700 the practice had become very uncommon.

FERRUS STEEL.

Thomas Doherty, of Sarnia, Ont., has discovered a new process for improving castings.
The process is simple and entirely new, and appears, like wrought iron, but is as strong. He writes:—
"I enclose you sample of what I name Ferrus Steel. It is much stronger than a top of an ordinary range. You can see the grain and sharp edges. It is so ductile that a strip 1 1/2 inch wide, 3/4 inch thick, 12 inches long can be wound around a 2-inch gas pipe without breaking; at the same time it is of great tensile strength, a 3/4 inch strip being 12 inches long bearing on the points will carry a load of 600 lb. without fracture. It is made from a mixture of 60 per cent common iron and 40 per cent No. 2 pig iron. My process is to inject steam jet into the tuyers at cupola, which forms an element in combustion (hydrogen gas), giving out great heat; forming black oxide of iron on the iron at the point of charge, and it is so closely coherent and adherent that the absorption of sulphur from coke is entirely prohibited on its course down through the furnace. The molten metal is much more fluid, and almost free from gas or dross, and gives a casting of a much smoother surface, with a steeple appearance. This process saves fully ten per cent. in fuel, and has several advantages of greater or lesser importance not stated. It is a process patented in all countries. The days of common cast iron are nearly ended."—Scientific American.

Henry M. Stanley Under Pay.

According to the Belgian blue book on the subject of the purchase of the Congo Free State it appears that Henry M. Stanley receives from the King of Belgium about a thousand pounds a year when on duty in Africa and one thousand pounds sterling when in Europe. While in the service he must neither publish a book nor deliver a lecture without the king's permission.
Bake-off of Herring.
A curious custom still survives at Yarmouth, England, by which the town is, by law, compelled to supply "a hundred herring yearly to the sheriff of Norwich, but in twenty-four years the market has advanced to the Lord of the Manor of Deseronto, who is to convey them to the king." They are still sent to the Queen's clerk of the kitchen.

People of all denominations will be glad to see Mr. Taylor spend a third year in Deseronto.

The first "Flower" service held by the Methodist Sunday School took place last Sunday afternoon, and, as many remarked at the close of the proceedings, it was indeed "a rich treat."

New Canadian Flag

The present Dominion flag has never commanded itself to the public opinion. It contains two sets of the different provinces grouped together in a manner which renders them undistinguishable and prevents one from time to time to decipher them. It is now usually suggested to substitute for the antiquity maple leaf emblem, as for instance the maple leaf and beaver. The maple leaf should be adopted as it is generally recognized as a national symbol.

TOM AND I.
The meadow, with its clover sweet,
Stretched far before our feet,
The daisies grew beneath our feet,
The meadow was so green and sweet,
I saw a merry band of children
When we walked through the meadow And together, Tom and I.
The linnets piped amid the sedges,
The blackbirds' notes were gay,
On hill and plain, and through the bushes,
The happy sunshine lay.
He questioned as he held my hand,
As we walked through the meadow land
Together, Tom and I.
And off the spring has brought since then
The daisies to near and peach,
The violets to the lowly ground,
The green leaves to the beach,
And scattered with her fairy wand
The gray mists from the sky
Since we walked through that meadow land
Together, Tom and I.
And we have had since that spring day
Our share of cool and hot,
And now, though old and bent and gray,
We come true, true and old,
In perfect faith, and hand in hand,
We wait the parting night,
Since we'll not in the better land
Together, Tom and I.

THE LADY'S DREAM.

Lady Blanche Varley was the only daughter of a wealthy Countess of Riversdale. She was also the loveliest girl of the age, but as cold and unimpassioned as a statue wrought from purest alabaster. Her sterner qualities were shared by Gerard Ransford, a young officer of Hussars, by her side, and he soon became enslaved in the meshes of love which she heartlessly weaver around him.

One evening when alone with her in the drawing room he declared his passion. Her eyes flashed, and she turned to him with a white hand, and as she glanced into his captured face a smile played around her lips. Gerard imagined the smile to be a sign of success, and his delight was unbounded.

On the impulse of the moment he clasped her into his arms and imprinted a warm kiss upon her forehead. She started, and then, with a look of surprise, she turned away and fled. Gerard was left staring after her, and he was again alone.

"Dear Lady Blanche!" he pleaded in tremulous tones, "pardon my impetuosity. I was overcome by your beauty and devotion to me. Do for my sake hold out one ray of hope."

"She vanished! no reply, but turned away from him, and he was left staring after her, and he was again alone."

At this time Count de Lornais, a scion of an old and wealthy French family, made his appearance in London society. De Lornais was a handsome man, with polite and fascinating manners, and it was soon whispered that he too was enthralled by the supreme loveliness of Lady Blanche.

All through one London season the count continued to show his allegiance to Lady Blanche, and then, one day, he announced that the handsomely-dressed Frenchman had beaten all his rivals and won the greatest beauty of the day at his own wedding.

"These rumors reached the ears of Gerard Ransford, who drew his own deductions therefrom."

"From that moment Gerard became an altered man. He no longer sought to receive his love, but he sought to win her to the betting ring and his nights to the card table. Formerly one of the most cheerful of companions, he was now an eager gambler, and he sought to win his money at any cost."

"After befooling the count month after month she one day abruptly informed him that marriage was the very last thought in her mind."

"Monsieur le Comte," she said, "you surely are not one of those foolish notions of society who imagine that every lady around whom they flutter is desirous of love for them."

"No, Lady Blanche," replied he, smiling significantly. "I am not a moth of that kind." He bowed distantly and retired, and Lady Blanche was left alone.

The count's vanity was wounded, and his elation at this unexpected repulse was very great. His belief in himself with regard to affairs of the heart was shattered, and as he could not attribute his failure to any fault of his own he concluded that more favored rival must have won the lady's love.

The young English officer, Gerard Ransford, had been a suitor for the lady's hand, but he had been rejected. He had been so successful for, whose sake he had been rejected, and he had been rejected accordingly.

Tom, and in a manner unknown to mortals they exchanged thoughts and talked to each other.

One night the phantom bade Lady Blanche to follow it, and it led her to a strange country over the sea, and when she glanced around she found herself in a sunny land, where the impenetrable dome of the "Athena" shrouded her in deep shadows, without a flick of cloud upon the horizon, and where the violet tinged sea met mutely against a flower covered shore, and the walks were lined with orange trees in blossom, and magnolia beautified the hedges with their pure white flowers. She followed and into a garden of lemon scented geraniums, every one six feet high, and down an avenue of myrtles, and everywhere the balmy air was perfumed with the sweet scent of flowers.

They entered in front of a large white building, into which many persons, both men and women, streamed, and in all their faces Lady Blanche observed the same eager, anxious and cruel expression.

Lady Blanche glanced inquiringly at the phantom.

"It said in answer to the lady's thought, 'this is Monte Carlo, and that is the Casino.'"

She then entered a large room, where many persons were seated round the tables. "I perceive," said the phantom, "that you recognize some of the gamblers."

"How changed he is!" remarked Lady Blanche as she glanced into the face of Gerard Ransford.

"Brightened hopes and gambling losses would change an angel, if one were so foolish as to fall in love with a fellow woman and wreck one's life over a card table."

Lady Blanche shuddered as she noted the bloodshot eyes and flushed face of Gerard Ransford.

"There's a great alteration between two men in a fierce passion," whispered the phantom as it drew Lady Blanche to one side of the room.

Two men had arisen from their seats and were now jostling violently, and they were soon joined by a fashionably dressed lady.

"I think you know these persons," remarked the phantom to Lady Blanche.

"Alas, yes," replied she. "The tall man is Gerard Ransford, and the other Count de Lornais, and the lady—"

"But here Lady Blanche hesitated," said the phantom, "is Phryne Marland," said the phantom, "completing Lady Blanche's unfinished sentence."

"The phantom," remarked the phantom, "will not tell you. There will be a dispute at some quiet spot in the morning."

"Oh, heaven! Not a duel, I pray!" cried Lady Blanche, clasping her hands together. "I am sure the phantom will satisfy the count, Ransford, as you are aware, is an officer of the English army, and he has struck the count a terrible blow. Look at the count's face, he has the count's cheekbone for both, their honors' sake they are bound to fight."

SALT IN THE BLOOD CURES.

Effects of the Injection of a Sterilized Solution in the Circulation.

A number of remarkable cures have been made by Dr. Thos. Leeman, of the well-known Yale Medical School professor, by the use of saline injections, which have cured patients when all other measures had been tried in vain, and fully restored them to health. So interesting have been the results of these experiments that they have attracted the greatest attention among medical men. One case of particular interest was that of Moses Leeman, who had nearly blind, and who the doctors declared to be incurable. The result was most remarkable, and Dr. Leeman is in the full enjoyment of his physical powers.

With the view of learning more of the method thus employed a New York World correspondent sought an interview with Dr. Russell at his office on Elm street, New Haven. With characteristic professional reticence he finally consented to talk on the subject. He said:

"The saline infusion is not original with me. It has been used in various forms for some time in medical practice, though not so frequently as I would like to see it used, or as I believe it will in time be employed. The process is very simple, yet there are certain conditions to be observed, and it is at the same time not void of danger. Leeman's case, to which you refer, was particularly notable. He was suffering from internal hemorrhage of the rectum. All the appliances generally used in such cases were tried in vain, and finally as a last resort, we decided to try the saline treatment upon him. He had suffered the loss of so much blood that great weakness had resulted, and death was only a few hours distant unless other relief could be had."

"The saline preparation is composed simply of pure water and common table salt, and finally as a last resort, we decided to try the saline treatment upon him. He had suffered the loss of so much blood that great weakness had resulted, and death was only a few hours distant unless other relief could be had."

"The doctor produced an ordinary glass funnel, of small size, such as is commonly used by druggists and chemists. To this was attached some elastic tubing, of small, dark rubber tubing, at the other extremity of which was a small glass tubing about eight inches long, bent at right angles to an angle of about forty-five degrees. In explaining its use Dr. Russell said:

"The end of this small glass tube is inserted in the artery of the patient's arm by means of an incision previously made and is fastened with a thyroid. The funnel is then raised to a proper height and the saline preparation is turned into the artery, and in an angle of about forty-five degrees. In explaining its use Dr. Russell said:

THE EVIL OF DARK ROOMS. People who keep their houses dark for fear of the sunlight, spoiling their carpets and furniture have done the disservice of destroying influence of sunlight and air.

Recent experiments made in the Pasture Institute have shown that the bacilli of the sun's rays and air were destroyed in two hours, while those exposed to the sun, the air being excluded, were alive after fifty hours of exposure.

One of the leading doctors of Naples made an interesting experiment with cholera bacilli. While he found those protected from the sun killed guinea pigs in eighteen hours, as usual, those exposed to the sun, although not killed, were rendered entirely harmless.

As to the influence of sun and air on bacilli, it was ascertained that the oxygen of the air had a marked effect in dissolving the sun's rays, and that the bacteria supplied more from the sun's rays if it was diminished.

Certain liquids, too, which will undergo putrefaction in the dark will remain pure and free from bacteria when exposed to the sun's rays. Air and sun are Nature's great purifiers.

The Onion as an Article of Food. The value of the onion as an article of food is constantly becoming better known.

A couple of onions plus a small bit of butter is a day's ration for a Spanish laborer, and the hardiest settler with a raw onion or two and an oatcake finds life well worth living.

In France a soup made from onions is universally in use after all violent exertions, and during the Emancipation war was always on the bill of fare provided by the commissariat after a battle or retreat. Last and most conclusive testimony of its usefulness, and strongest argument for its use, is recommended for the completion. Under these circumstances the statement of a confederate onion dealer that he had a cup of black coffee taken immediately after onions, and followed by a gargle of camphor and myrrh, removes all odor from the breath, is valuable.

The weather has turned warmer and with some friendly showers has made a great change. More rain is, however, needed. Many of our people went to Kingston on the 24th.

Mrs. Bryant, of Keenerville, has been visiting her uncle, Howard Richards. The picnic held here on the 24th proved a success and attracted a great crowd. A football match between our Shamrock and the Glenora club afforded much amusement.

FOXBORO.

Mrs. Albert Loncke entertained a number of her friends to dinner on the 24th. The Foxboro Literary Society held a most enjoyable picnic on the 24th. The ice cream social given by the ladies Aid on the evening of the 24th was a success. Over $30 was realized.

Dr. Frank Howard, of Toronto, was visiting friends here last Sunday. Charles Strong, stonemason, left last week for the United States to secure work. Too many of our workmen are leaving for the other side.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Simmons, of Boston, are visiting friends here.

WESTBROOK.

Vegetation has suffered much from the cold.

Harry Arnold, an old and respected resident of this place passed away on Saturday 18th. He had lived past the allotted age of man as his years had numbered ninety.

Miss Rosalind Brown, of Hay Bay, spent last week, the guest of the Misses Howie.

The free Methodists of this place purpose holding their camp meeting at Ontario Park. Mr. & Mrs. D. E. Grass, of Portmouth, spent Tuesday with their son, P. M. Grass. G. W. Ashley's raising bee on Tuesday was well attended.

Farmers are disappointed about the low price of cheese.

PARMA.

The farmers are through seeding now and are busy preparing their planting ground. The good ladies are through their tedious job, house cleaning.

We had a beautiful shower on Sunday evening and everything looked lovely on Monday morning even the farmers had a smile on their face.

Clover and wheat are looking beautiful in this part.

Miss Gertrude Sharp, of Hayburn was visiting Miss Maria Diamond for a few days.

Why does not the little fox hound come east as usual? Is it afraid of getting the bronchitis? It's becoming quite a fashion for the ladies to take the young men out driving. The latter think it very nice. Have no doubt that my big brother thinks so.

Mr. Wm. Riskey, of Hayburn, was visiting at Gilbert Garrison's.

Mrs. John Neilson is very ill.

Miss Maria Diamond was attending the Epworth League on Tuesday evening and had a nice time.

READ.

May 25.—Seeing that our correspondent has failed I now take up my pen to announce some of the important events of our village, which I think should not be left unnoticed.

Several frosts occurred and cold clouds; weather continues cold and cloudy; several frosts occurred and some damage has been done to the fruit trees, early corn and potatoes. Grain that was put in early has made little or no growth. Warm rain and high temperature are badly needed.

Quite a number of young men from here attended the horse races at Shannonville on Friday the 24th, and gave a good account of them.

Mr. Lessard had a ploughing bee on Wednesday. The neighbors generously responded and blackened over a good portion of his farm. He is busy seeding it now.

A barn belonging to John Davey was consumed by fire on Friday. The fire was noticed just in time to save the fence which was standing in the stable but nothing else could be saved. The barn contained a good store of feed and all the implements. There was no insurance.

Miss Katie Meagher who is attending school at Deseronto spent Friday and Saturday with her parents.

GREEN POINT.

The strawberry crop has been badly hurt by the late frosts.

A. J. Shortt lost seven hundred tomato plants which were set out besides several hundred in the hot bed last week.

Niss Barrington took advantage of the holiday and visited at Mr. A. Vandusen's on the 24th.

D. B. Cole had a fine piece of sweet corn so damaged by the frost that he ploughed it up and planted it.

Mr. Foster moved into Mr. Cole's tenant house on Monday.

F. Osborne, who has been on the sick list for several weeks, is recovering very slowly. A brand new top buggy arrived at George Row's last week.

Rev. David Wilson, who was formerly on this circuit visited, our Sunday school and at the request of our pastor preached for us last Sunday. His sermon was well received and forcible and all his friends in this district were glad to see him and greatly appreciated his address.

We have a new tenant on the Royal Row estate; three added to the school. Carpenter Joseph has the job of building a large dwelling for Mr. Duxsee on the third line.

A. Vandusen has purchased another house here on Manx street. Van has confidence in the prosperity of Deseronto.

John Shortt was the only lucky one to help eat the goose.

The various attractions elsewhere on the 24th were not strong enough to entice any from this locality, for no more pleasant place can be found at which to enjoy a day's outing, than Greenpoint on the beautiful shore of the Bay of Quinte. A large party from the surrounding neighborhood drove to B. Carman's with well filled baskets to have a stroll along the shore. J. E. Carman's grove was reached where the table spread and the partook of the contents of their baskets. The afternoon was spent very pleasantly, at least, so the young ladies say. This is only bait, look out for fish.

ODESSA.

The baseball game on Saturday last between Odessa and Newburgh was very closely contested. It resulted in a victory for the latter by a score of 21 to 5. With part of an innings to spare. The playing, considering the practice each team had, was good.

The game was played on the 24th. The Odessa team was made up of the following: R. W. Wyatt, 1; R. Cairns, 1; M. Lapam, 3; A. Cairns, 3; C. Young, 1; C. Cairns, 2; J. Agnew, 1; C. Jones, 1. Score by innings: 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 Total. Odessa 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 1. Newburgh 4 0 4 0 3 1 4 5 1 21.

F. Cairns and Lake started at battery for Odessa but Lake was relieved by R. Cairns who surprised everyone on the way he relieved the batt. Deroche and Ed. Shorey started at battery for Newburgh but they were twirled by Paul & Moore. Both batteries did good work but Ed. was not as effective as usual on account of having run a nail in his hand the day before. Newburgh batteries favored 9 men, Odessa 4 men.

The concert given by the Jubilee singers in aid of the organ fund of the Methodist church was a success financially and otherwise. The proceeds amounted to over $50. The singing of Mrs. Thomas and Mr. Mills was grand. Both have grand voices and are well supported by the rest of the company. They will be gladly welcomed by the people on their return on Saturday night when they will give an entirely different entertainment in aid of the B. I. C. Admission 15c and 10c. Come and encourage your base ball club.

On Ascension day 25th, by the Rev. T. P. Dibbs, in St. Alban's church, Odessa, was married to James Bernard Kilgour, of Richmond, Miss Sarah Elsie Brandon, of Violet, assisted the bride while Mr. Anson Parks, of Newburgh, performed the sacred duties for the groom. The ceremony was witnessed by a few of the intimate friends of the bride. After the ceremony the happy pair drove to Marven where a supper and repast awaited them at which they drove to Kingston to catch the train going east. We wish them a happy and prosperous voyage through life.

On Wednesday the 24th, by the Rev. W. B. Tucker, Miss Gertrude Bennett was married to Mr. William Dougherty. Their many friends in this vicinity extend their congratulations.

Visitors: Mr. and Miss McCulloch, of Newburgh, at the parsonage; the Misses Shorey's of Newburgh; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith, of Dr. McEachern's.

On Friday morning Nathan Solier's barn, one mile north of the village, was burned.

Miss Elsie is paining Mrs. Day's store and dwelling.

It is rumored that Will Clark intends running opposition to John Wheeler in the bar business.

The rain on Sunday eve caused most of the farmers to smile.

J. G. Ettinger, of Kingston, was in town on Friday.

Count of Revision was held in the Council chambers on Monday last.

BLESTINGTON.

Weather is a time worn subject, still people here like to hear the topic spring.

THE ELECTIONS WILL TELL.

Hated of organized agriculture and love of the old party unite writing prophecies that Patriotism is dead in Ontario.

Whether Patriotism is dying or living as a force W. E. Bell, of Belleville, is a candidate.

The Council intends holding an open meeting at which a very excellent programme will be submitted together with addresses from friend Campbell and other members of the Order.

The Epworth League of Christian Endeavor continued to be well attended and the interest seems unflagging. We have heard that some gentleman from Lonsdale went to Melrose Tuesday night to visit the League there and did not get home till morning. The car was removed to Marysville and the road soon repaired by Mr. Bailey and men.

Mrs. R. Roach and children, of Deseronto, were visiting C. Driscoll this week.

Carmenville boats of three species of night birds but we have two, the hawk and the owl.

The latter is rather a careless wanderer, falls asleep and roams into strange lanes and side roads, on dark rainy nights. The hawk being older and consequently wiser, keeps awake and tracks the poor sleeping owl but neither seeks his habitation till the wee small hours. What a pity it is to have the people, especially the early milkmen, disturbed in this way.

The trotting races at the driving park, Shannonville, on the Queen's Birthday, drew quite a fair attendance and the different events passed off pleasantly. The races were very good, some of the heats being of exciting character.

In the House of Commons on Thursday last week Mr. G. H. Wilson, M. THE WONDERFUL

IRON DUKE CORN CULTIVATOR.

Instantly Narrowed or Widened
By turning the Crank.

Fitted with Reversible Steels and Extra Hillers.

Our Improved Iron Duke Corn Cultivator.

This Cultivator has proven a wonderful success. It has had a remarkable sale. We have placed it on an attachment for instantly narrowing or widening the wings by simply turning a crank. This is an improvement of a substantial nature, and will commend itself to purchasers. We have several styles of steels to choose from, but our No. 38, as shown in cut, appears to be the favorite. The Iron Duke is compact, light and strong, is a model of elegance, does the work of 10 men, and is in every way a superior tool. Buy no other. The mechanism for narrowing and widening instantly is ingenious and strong. The wings are held firmly in position. The longer you use this little tool the better you like it.

The different sections in the portion sold to the Roman Catholic Congregation have been nearly all effected. Several new roads have been travelled and the different walks are newly watered and in the vicinity of the vault have been set out with rare flowers. ST. MARK'S CHURCH NOTES.

The special collection last Sunday for the Domestic Mission fund was a fairly liberal one.

The closing voluntary by the organist last Sunday evening was appropriate to the nearness of the day for the seventy-fourth anniversary of her Grazious Majesty's birth. Needless to say the strains of praise were those of the National Anthem.

A meeting of the Finance committee was held on Wednesday evening. It would greatly assist the church officers in meeting the various financial engagements if every one attending St. Mark's would kindly adopt the envelope system, contributing each Sunday a stated amount.

The young ladies of the congregation who held on the 24th inst. a refreshment booth in the Park are to be congratulated upon the success attending their energetic labors.

Mr. Patton hopes to officiate on the three next Sundays before his temporary absence from the parish. He will probably leave on the 17th prox.

The clergy would be glad if parents having children to be baptized would arrange to bring them to church as early as possible, so that they may appear at the baptism.

Shortened Evensong to-night at 7:45 succeeded by the weekly choir practice at 8:15.

The Rector has been in attendance at the Diocesan committee meetings in Kingston this week.

OFF FOR OTTAWA.

W. A. Macleod, of the General office of the Railway Company, left on Monday for Ottawa where he has accepted a responsible position with a leading lumbering firm of that city. On Monday evening he was given a good send-off by the members of the Deseronto Cricket club and other friends. Naylor's opera house was the scene of the event and most happy and enthusiastic was the large crowd present upon the occasion.

W. D. Macleod, the most genial of chairmen, presided and directed the proceedings of the evening. Refreshment had been served and all were partaken of amid a general flow of pleasing conversation. A most pleasant episode of the evening was the presentation of a marble cricket ball and fine cricketing outfit to Mr. Macleod by the members of the cricket club. The clock, which was purchased at G. E. Snider's, was very handsomely engraved with real bronze ornaments. The presentation was made by Mr. Macleod in a neat speech. Mr. Macleod was almost completely overcome by this unexpected proof of the good will of his Deseronto friends. He thanked them most heartily for their generous gift.

A number of toasts were proposed and responded to during the evening. The usual patriotic toasts were honored. "Our Guest" was proposed in a neat speech by the chairman who referred to Mr. Macleod's good record as a citizen of Deseronto for thirteen years and the loss which the town and club sustained by his removal. The "Corporation of Deseronto" drew out eloquent replies from Reeve Dalton and Councillor Gault. "The Cricket Club" was responded to by Dr. D. D. Macleod.

Allan, W. J. Malley and others, all referring to the great regret felt by members of the club at losing such an all round cricketer as Mr. Macleod. The "Office Staff" elicited able addresses from Messrs. Wright, Mills, Hynes, Hall, Chapman, Lowry, Lloyd, and "Ladies" were most ably championed by Chas. A. Crawford in an eloquent speech. "Our Host" was responded to in characteristic style by T. J. Naylor. "Business Interests" was replied to by Messrs. Wm. Bogart, Bro. and other solid men of the town. During the evening R. Wiseman, T. P. Culhane and L. R. Booth made several good and useful effect and T. J. Naylor, Mr. Murray and John Welsh gave capital recitations. The affair was voted one of the most enjoyable ever held in town.

The Tribune may add that Mr. Macleod is well deserving of this expression of regard. He has been an estimable citizen, always genial and invariably courteous. He is one of the best cricketers in Ontario. He is held in high regard by his employers who always found him faithful.

He left by the midnight express a number of friends accompanying him to the station to bid him bon voyage and wish him success at the Capital.

70,000,000 CIGARETTES.

A Montreal dispatch states that 70,000,000 cigarettes were consumed in Canada last year.

The statement is alarming. It means that the average consumption for each male over fifteen years of age was about fifty. When allowance is made for those who never smoke cigarettes at all an estimate can be formed of the enormous number of those paper-wrapped concoctions that must be smoked by those who do use tobacco in this form.

It may not be considered expedient to prohibit the use of cigarettes altogether, but certainly the tax on them should be made high enough to greatly restrict a habit which causes the most serious injury to the constitution of those who indulge to excess in it.—Toronto Daily News.

A DREADFUL DISEASE CURED.

Messrs. Douglas Bro. & Co.

Gentlemen, I have much pleasure in offering you testimonial on the cure of Barber's Itch. For over three weeks my face was nothing but a mass of sores, and it was still getting worse. I got so bad that I was ashamed to go out on the street. I went to a very prominent doctor of this town and he told me it would be a few months before I could get rid of it. On a Sunday a neighbor came to my house and told me of your Douglas' Egyptian Liniment and requested me to try it. I thought I would give it a trial; I put it on my face that same day, and inside of three days my face was as smooth as ever it was. I might also say that I only bled my face once and that I could have a permanent cure. I cannot recommend your Liniment too highly for the value it has been to me. This I declare to be true and correct. I remain yours.

CRICKET MATCH.

The first cricket match of the season in the district was played on the Queen's birthday on the grounds of the Deseronto Cricket Club, adjoining the High School. The contesting eleven represented the Royal Military College, Kingston, and the Deseronto Club. The weather was superb and the game was witnessed by a large number of spectators who took the greatest interest in the proceedings. Deseronto won the first by a score of 11 runs, which Macdonald contributed 24 and Gullane 14, the only two making double figures. The batsmen following were: Deseronto, 14, Smith 13 and Stairs 11. The game, it will be remembered, was a time game and when they had run up 90 called the game without waiting to increase the score. Of this the ever reliable Macdonald contributed 28, Crooke 17, Cole 11, Allen 10. The Royal Military College then went in for their second innings and made 62 runs if they were to win the game. But the bats were unpropitious as they were quickly retired for 17 of which 13 was the only double figure. Deseronto then declared victorious by fourteen runs with a man to spare. The score was as follows:

DYES.

The game was most interesting from start to finish.

Many visitors came from Napanee to witness the match.

The visitors were a most gentlemanly set of young men. Will be glad to see them back in Deseronto at any time.

Macdonald bowled exceedingly well for Deseronto; Uniaque trundled well for the visitors.

Macdonald batted in splendid style and carried off the honors of the day. He ran up 24 in the first inning and 28 in the second innings for Deseronto, total of 52. Mac had always that way of doing things.

Cole not out in the second innings had 11 to his credit; good for as many more.

Stairs for the visitors had a dozen runs. Wilbey made 14 in the first inning.

It would be well if some of the spectators, old and young, in this respect, would discontinue the rather ill-mannered practice of "crying" visiting teams. Only a few offenders in this way, but it is unpleasant to spectators.

Uniaque has probably played his last for Deseronto; he has left for Ottawa.

Meers Bedford and Kirkpatrick were most efficient umpires.

The victory Deseronto is more wonderful when it is considered that they had no practice before the match.

Deseronto cricketers should make up their minds to steady and careful practice if they are to maintain their supremacy.

Crooke ran up the neat score of 19 in the second innings for Deseronto. Good.

Capt. Allum was not in his usual good form but he contributed 15 runs to the grand total.

Sherwood did well for the College in the first innings, 19 good runs standing to his credit.

Cole was batted very well, his grand total is 18, of which 14 was in the first inning.
